Mayaguez and crew recovered

By The Associated Press

Under a protective blanket of fire from U.S. warplanes and naval guns, the last U.S. Marines were rescued tonight from a small Cambodian island, a White House source reported. They had weathered 14 hours of heavy, intermittent Khmer Rouge fire following the armed recovery of the U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez and its 40 crewmen.

A Pentagon spokesman said earlier that two aircraft carriers and a half dozen other U.S. warships were either close to the island or en route, apparently to aid in rescuing the Marines if needed.

The Mayaguez, seized Monday, was reported steaming toward Singapore, manned by its own crew following its recovery.

In Laos, student demonstrators threatened to kill three Americans unless the Laotian government removes alleged corrupt provincial officials and right-wing reactionaries.

In Saigon, the new South Vietnamese government said it is willing to open diplomatic ties with the United States.

The Pentagon said one Marine was killed in the initial assault on the Cambodian island. Earlier, Pentagon sources said two were killed and at least eight wounded.

Two helicopters also were reported lost in the operation, and one pilot was quoted as saying there were many wounded when his chopper crashed in the first minutes of the attack.

The Marines were hit in a helicopter assault against Koh Tang, an island about 30 miles from the Cambodian mainland, the Pentagon said. It said U.S. fighter planes and Navy destroyers kept up attacks on the island as darkness fell to cover the helicopter evacuation of the Marines to the aircraft carrier Coral Sea.

A Pentagon spokesman said a number of helicopters approaching the beachhead were driven off by heavy Khmer Rouge fire.

The Marines retook the Mayaguez after U.S. planes sank three Cambodian gunboats Wednesday in the Gulf of Thailand and later attacked airfields on the Cambodian coast. The Cambodians also surrendered five Thai fishermen captured by the Khmer Rouge while fishing in the Gulf of Thailand.

In a broadcast early today, President Ford said he had ordered the attack to retake the Mayaguez "for the purpose of rescuing the crew and ship which had been illegally seized by Cambodian forces. I have now received information that the vessel has been received intact and that the entire crew has been rescued."

In Bangkok, Premier Kukrit Pramoj said America acted in an "unfriendly" way by disregarding his requests and using Thai bases to stage the armed rescue of the Mayaguez. He said he would take steps to prevent any such incidents in the future.

A Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman said earlier that Thailand is preparing a "diplomatic move" over the Mayaguez episode.

The Thai spokesman termed the U.S. action a "breach of faith" and said Thailand is "displeased" because the U.S. government sent the Marines used in the attack to a Thai base despite Pramoj's announcement that he wanted no involvement for his country.

In Vientiane, a U.S. Embassy source said although the students were not likely to carry out their death threats they were being taken seriously.

The Americans were taken hostage Wednesday during an anti-American demonstration in Savannakhet in southern Laos.

The embassy identified them as Sanford J. Stone, 58, of Cleveland, Ohio, area coordinator for the Agency for International Development; Daniel P. Ster, 28, of Columbus, Ind., an economic affairs officer; and Charles R. Pearcy, 63, of Salem, W. Va., a property officer.

In Saigon, Nguyen Huu Tho, chairman of the advisory council of the Provisional Revolutionary Government, said ties could be established with Washington provided the United States carries out its "responsibilities as provided by the Paris agreement of 1973."

He did not elaborate but the new Saigon government has been demanding the United States recognize it as the government of South Vietnam, respect its sovereignty and not interfere in its internal affairs.

Wednesday night — Thursday morning Cambodian time — the White House announced that the Marines were landing on Koh Tang and U.S. planes were bombing airfields on the south coast of Cambodia.

Suits filed to collect $3 million

MEMPHIS (AP)-Three lawsuits seeking to collect more than $3 million in defaulted loans have been filed by Union Planters National Bank in connection with Southeast Missouri investments.

The Chancery Court lawsuits named as defendants Cecil F. Montgomery of Memphis, Helen M. Johnson of Sikeston, Mo., Richard Henley Montgomery, no address given, and Joel A. Montgomery and Mary Lou Montgomery, both of Sikeston.

The bank claimed in one lawsuit that the defendants had defaulted on 10 loans approved by the bank from Dec. 24, 1973, to Sept. 23, 1974.

The bank asked for a judgment of almost $3 million on the loans. The suit said collateral posted for the loans were 11,624 shares of First National Company of Sikeston stock, 18,564 shares of First National Bank of Malden, Mo., stock, 3,302 shares of Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co. of Missouri stock and debentures valued at $28,400.

On March 31, the bank tried unsuccessfully to transfer the stocks, thesuit said.

Hearnes warns against big brother government

NEW MADRID — Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Charleston, who spoke on the nation's heritage of 1776 Wednesday night at the eighth annual Chamber of Commerce awards banquet, said, "we need to be reminded of the debt we owe to our forefathers and to examine the foundation of our way of life."

"The cornerstone of the American quality of life rests on a strong spiritual foundation. It is one of the most precious legacies of our heritage. It was originally religion, not a political system that held forth our hope for liberty", he said.

Hearnes said the fighters in the American Revolution were consumed with a value system emanating from a religious heritage and their concern was justice for every man. "That same value system permeates the Constitution and the Bill of Rights."

Hearnes warned that the nation is treading on the threshold hof a big brother government that was never dreamed of, which allows government agencies to harass citizens at taxpayers' expense; and he called on the people to stand up and say, "That is not the America we want -- we want the America that we have known before."

Charge changed to first-degree murder

NEW MADRID — A charge of felonious assault with intent to kill, filed Wednesday against James Bowman, about 55, of Portageville, was amended this morning to first-degree murder following the death Wednesday of Elizabeth Lockridge from gunshot wound inflicted about midnight Tuesday, apparently by Bowman.

The woman, who was shot with a sawed-off 12-gauge shotgun on a road east of Bay Ditch in Portageville, died at 5 p.m. in Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston.

Bowman voluntarily surrendered to Portageville police shortly after the shooting and is in custody of the New Madrid County Sheriff's Department.

Magistrate John R. Bailey appointed an attorney Wednesday to defend Bowman against the earlier charge, for which bond was set at $500.

Bowman was expected to be arraigned sometime today on the murder charge.

The body was taken to DeLisle Funeral Home in Portageville following an autopsy examination today.

Shoe factory building sold

The 60-61 Corp. has entered into an agreement with International Shoe Co. to purchase the shoe factory building at the intersection of Main Street and East Malone Avenue, according to an attorney representing the firm.

The attorney said the price has been negotiated, but refused to say what the price is. The 60-61 Corp. will take possession of the building when the shoe company removes equipment remaining in the structure.

The factory began shutting down operations April 30 because of low shoe sales.

The attorney said no decision has been made about what will be done with the building and that he does not know if a firm would be sought to occupy the building.

Small loan bill wins first-round approval

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Small loan companies would be permitted to charge a higher interest rate on loans between $500 and $2,500 under provisions of a bill given first-round approval in the Missouri House Wednesday.

The state Senate, meanwhile, gave final approval to a number of bills and sent them on to the House. Those measures included a bill compensating billboard owners whose signs are taken down in compliance with a federal law, allowing county tax assessors to assess farm property at its agricultural value rather than its market value and aid to junior colleges.

The small loan interest bill, which still faces final passage before going to the Senate, calls for a maximum interest charge of 13.2 per cent on loans between $500 and $2,500. The small loan industry sought a hike to 16.2 per cent. The rate for loans under $500 was left at the present 26.6 per cent.

Kansas City Democrat James Baker sought to lower the increase to 12 per cent, saying the rate on small loans was recently boosted from 8 to10 per cent when the general usury law was increased in January. But the amendment was narrowly rejected.

Supporters said that if the small loan rate was not increased, firms dealing in such loans would leave Missouri.

That argument drew fire from opponents who said supporters were not able to provide more definite information on a need for the increase.

"There's been a great deal of avoidance of answers," said St. Louis Democrat Stan Piekarski.

A proposed constitutional amendment providing a way to finance a veterans' bonus of up to $400 per person was also given overwhelming approval by the House.

The Senate cleaned out a list of bills awaiting final consideration.

The billboard compensation bill was one of those.

It was sponsored by Sen. Robert Yount, D-St. Ann, and is designed to bring Missouri law into compliance with the federal Highway Beautification Act. It prohibits the erection of outdoor advertising signs beyond 660 feet of the corridors of interstate and primary highways outside areas which are commercially and industrially zoned.

It also sets down regulations covering the size of billboards along the roadways and the distance between them.

Compensation would have to be paid to owners of billboards which were legally erected before March 30, 1972.

The Senate also gave final approval to a junior college aid bill which provides an additional $3.2 million in state funds to Missouri's junior colleges. A similar bill has already been approved in the House.

Other bills given final approval were:

—A measure exempting nonprofit and fraternal organizations from sales tax during charitable functions.

—A resolution extending circuit breaker tax relief to the blind and disabled.

—A bill allowing persons to serve on grand juries once during a five-year period rather than the present 10-year limitation.

—A bill calling for the payment of a $15 fee by persons who are reissued revoked drivers' licenses.

We have been told for many years (a) that many of the South Vietnamese in their hearts regard the Viet Cong (Communists) as genuine national liberators, and would have given the Viet Cong their support if not prevented by the corrupt dictatorship of a U.S.-backed Saigon regime; and (b) that virtually all of the South Vietnamese people, whatever their sentiments about the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese, are so worn down by the horrors of the war that they would, if given any sort of chance, be more than glad to accept Communist rule than have the war continue. But again this month, as in the case of every major Communist take-over in past years, the South Vietnamese people, instead of welcoming the advancing Communists with open arms as liberators or at any rate passively accepting their presence as bringing an end to the fighting, flee before the Communist columns by the tens hundreds of thousands -- children, wives, grandparents, anyone and everyone, at whatever risk, all seek to escape the Communist embrace. The verdict which their feet have been voting is unambiguous: they hate and fear Communism.

Vance Hartke and four other senators have proposed a moratorium on mortgage foreclosures, car repossessions, and termination of utility services for the unemployed. The Federal Reserve would either buy defaulted loans and mortgages or provide loans to be repaid if and when the worker took a job. Regular unemployment benefits already replace 60 per cent to 100 per cent of after-tax earnings, and the Hartke proposal would make it silly to make payments on a mortgage, auto loan, or utility bill.

It's a really neat idea that only could come out of the cracked dome of the Capitol -- so why not pass a law for instant prosperity, too, Senator?

NO MYSTERY HERE

Probably no one was more astounded that oil company executives when sporadic shortages of gasoline during the past summer were accompanied by charges of an oil industry conspiracy. The natural response of the industry leaders was one of spontaneous and vehement denial--amounting to almost disbelief that such a notion could be countenanced by anyone capable of logical reasoning.

There are those who still accept the "nonsense" of an oil industry conspiracy. Thus it is well to recall some statistics about the industry, as noted by the chairman of the board of one of the nation's largest oil companies. "This is an industry in which there are 7,000 oil and gas producers, 127 refining companies, over 30,000 marketing firms, and nearly 200,000 independently owned or managed retail outlets." It is hard to visualize an industry as broadly based as oil entering into any sort of a conspiracy. The fundamental reasons for the petroleum shortage have been frequently cited. The oil company official reviews them once again. Some of the causes cited include controls on the wellhead price of natural gas, imposed in 1954, which increased the demand and reduced the incentive to search for new supplies; environmental restrictions that curtail the use of coal and heavy fuel oil, greatly increasing the demand for light heating oils; and environmental fears that have denied access to the nearly 10 billion barrels of crude reserves on the North Slope of Alaska.

There is no mystery about the oil and natural gas shortage. It has been in the making for a long time. Attempting to obscure the obvious in a smoke screen of vague charges against the petroleum industry will just prolong the fuel shortage and worsen the entire energy picture.

RETURN TO CONTROLS?

IT WILL be no news to our readers that this writer is opposed to wage and price controls. We believe that reinstitution of a controls program would have devastating effects on hopes for future economic growth and price stability. We are discovering, however, that some readers-even those who agree as to the undesirability of a return to controls-believe that our writings in that vein are largely on academic exercise. In the present political atmosphere, it is said, controls have become inevitable. There is no use debating whether controls are good or bad; all we can do is prepare ourselves for living under them.

In our opinion, that kind of political fatalism is mistaken. Obviously, we cannot give any guarantees that controls will not be reimposed. If certainty on that score were possible, that too would be a good reason not to bother writing on the subject-there is no use beating a dead horse. It is because there is uncertainty as to whether the nation will or will not return to controls in the coming months that the issue is worth discussing.

We will go beyond that and venture the opinion that, for at least the coming session of Congress, the odds are against the restoration of a comprehensive wage-price control system.

True, the general public is now overwhelmingly in favor of wage and price controls. That is well established by opinion polls, and it is not at all surprising. When inflation is rampant, the public is prone to take a simplistic view of the way it may be stopped. As the man in the street sees it, if the price level is rising, why doesn't the government simply step in with legislation and regulation that forbids prices to rise? What could be simpler and what are we waiting for?

Does it then follow that elected officials, who must regularly return to the public for reelection, will inevitably bow to the wishes of their constituency and restore controls promptly? The answer is "not necessarily," since there are other forces to be reckoned with.

Public support for controls is support for the controls idea in the abstract. It is always strongest when controls are not in effect. When controls are in effect, no one is ever happy for very long with the particular controls program they have to live with. Equity is always stated as the key objective of the controls system, but there is never agreement as to what constitutes equity. The universal experience with controls is that, not immediately but after an interval, every segment of the population comes to feel that the program is biased against them.

It may be irrelevant to point out that controls have always been an economic failure. But it is certainly relevant to observe that controls have also proved, eventually, to be a political failure in every instance. Politicians who have been identified with controls will, at that point, find it a liability.

One can observe a fairly regular cycle in the public attitude toward controls between the time they are imposed and the time they are abandoned. This is clearly illustrated in the 1971-1974 experience, but it is also evident in other controls episodes here and abroad. At the beginning, when controls are first imposed, they enjoy universal acclaim and support. After about a year that support has begun to erode. After about two years the controls program has lost practically all public support. Consumers, labor, and businessmen are by that time all opposed to the control effort, although for different and conflicting reasons.

The point is that, if a new control effort is mounted within the next few months, the public is likely to approve strongly for, say, the rest of this year. But elected officials will have no opportunity to profit from that public approval, since there is no national election this year. By the time the next national election comes, almost two years from now, the controls program will have had time to fall apart and general public approval may well have been replaced by general public resentment. At least, the risk of this is great enough to give government officials pause.

Of course, elected officials are not likely to describe the situation that way in their public statements. But we believe that enough of them are aware of the danger to give us hope that government actions regarding controls will not be as bad as the speeches of public officials on the same subject.

All this might lead to the thought that, even if we are safe against controls in 1975, 1976 will be the really dangerous period. Controls instituted during the latter year might still enjoy public acclaim on election day and hence might seem a wise political move. But here the economic cycle may come to our rescue. The prospects are that between now and 1976 the economy will be softening. With a softer economy, the rate of inflation will surely be greatly reduced from the two-digit rates of recent experience. It will appear that substantial progress is being made against inflation and the public clamor for controls will be moderated.

To those who agree that controls are an economic abomination our message is: be of good cheer, all is not lost. In the fight against controls this is not a time for complacency but neither is it a time for defeatism. There are some real advantages on our side.

THREE-ACT COMEDY ON BUDGET

Spending by Congress is becoming so excessive that actions on the federal budget sound like Alice's Mad Tea Party.

The new committee in the Senate which is supposed to hold down federal spending is recommending a federal budget of $365 billion for fiscal 1976. This will produce a deficit of about $67.2 billion.

Then, must to demonstrate that the outer limits of spending still have not been reached, Sen Walter Mondale, D-Minn., proposed a bill loaded with job stimulating programs that would add another $9 billion to the proposed $67.2 billion deficit. This was voted down 64 to 29. End of Act I.

In Act II Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., obviously not playing the game, proposed a measure to cut the projected deficit by $2.2 billion. The Senate defeated this 62 to 33, ignoring Dole's pleas to cut out such things as studies of comic books and Polish bisexual frogs. End of Act II.

Then in Act III, the Senate really showed where it stands on the gut issue of deficit spending. Sen. Jessie Helms, R-N.C., proposed a motion to balance the federal budget.

What an affront! Spenders in the Senate rallied to crush this "radical" who was so bold as to suggest that the federal government not spend more than it receives in taxes and revenues. The vote against this "revolutionary" idea was 75 to 9, or more than 8 to 1 against balancing the budget. End of Act III.

After witnessing this comedy, it seems almost incredible that the nation operated WITHOUT an income tax until 1913, and that when the tax went into effect that year it was only at the rate of 1 per cent. Believe it or not, that tax raised only $100 million its first year — but it was enough for a government which had not yet learned how to spend tax money wildly.

Now, 62 years later, the proposed $365 billion budget is 3,650 times greater than the total receipts from that first year of the income tax. That should tell taxpayers something about how big the government has grown and how the Democratic majority in Congress handles their money.

NEED CLEAR THINKING ABOUT NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE

According to Perspective magazine, the U.S. holds the undisputed world record for health spending. Even so, Congress is still considering expanding into some sort of national health insurance, which would be another step toward socialized medicine.

The Office of Research & Statistics of the Social Security Administration estimates U.S. health spending will pass the $100- billion mark for the first time. For fiscal year 1974, health expense in our nation reached an estimated $104.2 billion.

That's up 10.6 per cent over 1973, a year when "mandatory economic controls were fully in effect for the health industry." And that's a whopping 7.7 per cent of the total gross national production of the nation.

U.S. health spending for FY-1974 represents a new high inper capita spending: $485 for each man, woman and child in America. Far more for the aged; considerably less for the under- 25 half of the population; but $485 on the average for all Americans regardless of age, health condition, economic, geographic or other factors.

The big shift in spending was in the public sector. While private- sector expense as a percentage of total spending was down from 62 per cent to 60.4 per cent, public spending went from 38 per cent to 39.6 per cent... just under 40 per cent of all health dollars. Reason for the big shift are the "substantial increases in expenditures under the Medicare and Medicaid programs," for the aged, the disabled and the poor.

Translated: despite being the only major nation in the world without national health insurance, four out of every 10 health dollars are coming from federal, state and local government, mostly federal.

Hospitals still get the lion's share of total outlay: 39 per cent. In dollars this represents $41 billion for FY-74.

Physicians get a shade less than half that amount: $19 billion.

Druggists are third in ranking: nearly $10 billion.

Nursing homes of all types have now become the fourth biggest recipient of health dollars: $7.5 billion.

After that come dentists ($6 billion), construction ($5 billion) and research ($2.5 billion).

So it is obvious that the American people need to evaluate the costs of government- controlled health insurance proposed in Congress and to use their influence to get what they want and what they are willing to accept taxwise.

Can This Marriage Be Saved?

WASHINGTON - As if Washington did not have enough to worry about, it now, for the umpteenth time, is sweating out consummation of the marriage between its two pet pandas, Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling. Everyone knows that those of us who live in the capital are a long- suffering people, but we're all losing patience with Ksing-Hsing who either doesn't know, or doesn't care, about fulfilling his role as a husband and a father.

Zoo officials have indicated that Ling-Ling not only has been ready but eager to have a baby panda. But he has been unable to get Hsing-Hsing into the hay.

The people in this town are so upset about this state of affairs that they have raised a fund to hire a sex therapist to see if he could do something about Hsing-Hsing's hangups.

His name is Dr. Newlove and he studied under Masters and Johnson before he decided to specialize in sex therapy for pandas.

Dr. Newlove agreed to talk, but warned he would say nothing to violate a physician- patient relationship.

"I would Say Hsing-Hsing is my most interesting case. If you look into his family history, he suffered from an overbearing Mandarin mother and a weak Cantonese father. He also was born right after the Cultural Revolution in China when making love was denounced as a capitalist bourgeois activity to distract the masses. This left a lot of scars on Hsing-Hsing."

"How do you plan to treat him?" I asked the good doctor.

"Slowly," he raplied.

"Why don't you set up a television set in Hsing-Hsing's cage and show X-rated movies?"

"I know you're not going to believe this," Drd. Newlove said, "but pandas do not get turned on my human beings making love. The few times we've shown erotic films to pandas they started throwing orange peels at each other."

"It figures," I said.

"The ideal thing," he said, "would be to get some films of pandas making love to each other, but the only ones who have them are the Chinese and they won't give them to us until we let them take back Taiwan."

"I know this is probably a chauvinist ramark," I said. "but is it possible that Ling-Ling is to blame for Hsing'Hsing's impotence? Maybe she doesn't know how to excite him."

"There is always that possibility. Sometimes the female panda forgets her sensuality and does not look exciting when the male panda comes into the cage. I plan to have several sessions with Ling'-Ling alone, teaching her to be more adventurous and more feeling. So far her idea of love play is to hit Hsing-Hsing over the head with her food bowl. Not all male pandas consider this a prelude to a seduction."

"Have you thought about waterbed?" I ask him.

"I'm having one made now," Dr. Newlove replied. "Also I'm trying to find a perfume that Hsing-Hsing might go for. Apparently, whatever Ling-Ling is using now is not doing the trick."

"It's too bad you can't use a surrogate wife," I said. "I read that sometimes that helps."

"I would if I could find one. My biggest problem is Hsing'Hsing has no one to compare Ling-Ling with. If I could get some fat, dowdy female panda in the cage, Hsing-Hsing might realize Ling- Ling is rather attrative and he could do a lot worse. But since all he ever sees is Ling-Ling, he takes her for granted . Hsing-Hsing honestly believes Ling-Ling is the only fish in the sea."

"If you can't do it," I told the doctor, "no one can."

"That's nice of you to say." he said modestly. "I know if I could get Hsing-Hsing into the marriage bed just once, he'd turn into a tiger."

Did CIA Back Trujillo Death Plot0

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON--Dictator Rafael Trujillo was gunned down on May 30, 1961, thus ending his 31-year tyranny over the Dominican Republic. His military police efficiently rounded up the assassins and tortured them to death.

We have now learned that before they died, they gave detailed confessions implicating the Central Intelligence Agency in the assassination plot. The tortured men believed the CIA not only supported them but would save them.

According to their confession, the CIA was supposed to prevent the old tyrant's murderous son, Ramfis, from returning to Santo Domingo. Nevertheless, he flew home in a chartered plane and personally directed the torture.

His father had been bushwhacked on a lonely highway by a few military and civilian marksmen, backed by a conspiracy of 20 to 40 others, with supporters in the hundreds. The military security forces hauled in dozens--some say hundreds--for torture. From their agonized confessions, a detailed summary was written and presented to Ramfis, who has since died.

The existence of the summnary, however, is attested to by sources close to the surviving Trujillo family members. We have also been in contact with the family itself, but they refuse to discuss the CIA's role in the assassination.

They would say only that they regret Rafael Trujillo was not informed by the CIA of the plot against him. "After all, he was not an enemy. He should have been told," a family spokesman said.

One Trujillista veteran, now a respected businessman, acknowledged that he had helped compile the summary. "The CIA helped get the guns and gave the plotters encouragement," he said in a statement to us.

He charged that the plotters "were urged on by Lear Reed," a former U.S. embassy aide in Santo Domingo, who was regarded by his colleagues as a CIA man, but left the Dominican Republic about eight months before the assassination.

After Reed left, according to the death-throes confessions of the assassins, they kept close contact with two U.S. diplomats whom they call "Mutt" and "Jeff" after the tall and short comic strip characters.

Messages were carried from the plotters to the CIA, according to the tortured men's last words by a brave young Dominican pediatrician, Dr. Robert Reid. After the assassination, he hid three of the plotters. When the secret police closed in, the doctor committed suicide.

"The assassins believed that the CIA was going to head off Ramfis..." claims the former Trujillo aide. "But he chartered a plane and got back to Santo Domingo in time to take over the old man's apparatus. I can't swear that the CIA ever tried to delay Ramfis, but the plotters under torture--and it was very, very ugly--swore they'd never have killed Trujillo unless they thought the CIA was going to save their skins somehow."

Footnote: U.S. intelligence sources confirm they were aware of the plot and kept abreast of it in a general way. But they deny that the CIA was a direct participant. Lear Reed has died. One of the surviving conspirators, Gen. Antonio "Tony" Imbert has also denied that the CIA helped him kill Trujillo. But denials or not, the tortured men thought they had U.S. approval and they expected U.S. help.

PUFF BAGS: Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., is making a behind-the-scenes attempt to obtain White House tapes which he suspects may prove President Nixon sold out air bag safety to Detroit's auto makers.

The puff bags, according to federal data, would save 10,000 lives a year, prevent countless injuries and save the nation's drivers and insurance companies $4 billion annually in hospital and other costs.

But Ford and Chrysler have fought strenuously against the bags for years, General Motors has been lukewarm and now President Ford is personally wavering on the devices.

In a private letter to Special Watergate prosecutor Henry Ruth, Moss, as House Commerce Investigations chairman, suggests that meetings between the White House and Ford and Chrysler officials may be behind the air bags' political problems.

Hoping to get Watergate-style dialogue on the secret talks, Moss asked Ruth to "review White House tapes...to determine whether conversations took place (on) air bag standards."

The tapes are presently tied up in the courts.

But in 1971, we told of an April 27, 1971, meeting between Henry Ford II and Nixon involving auto safety. A confidential Moss subcommittee memo now says this meeting and others were held amid "talk of Henry Ford (playing) a role on behalf of Nixon's re-election."

After one meeting, attended by White House aide John Ehrlichman, Transportation Secretary John Volpe "retired with the White House staff" and later told a top aide, "We are in trouble on the air bag..."

Volpe was right. The White House shelved the air bag for at least five years by replacing it "temporarily" with the ill-fated starter interlock belt system which was installed on 1974 cars. It was so unpopular with drivers it was scuttled.

A few days ago, falling in line with his predecessor, President Ford bucked his own Transportation Department experts and questioned whether the air bag was "cost-effective."

Footnote: The Transportation Department plans hearings on air bags in a few days, once again with heated auto industry opposition to the safety device.

Why Clobber CIA? Was Mafia In On Jack Kennedy Assassination?

WASHINGTON -- There's a better case to be made for charges that the Mafia assassinated Jack Kennedy than there is for profitable efforts to implicate Bill Colby's Central Intelligence Agency. It isn't fashionable to write kindly of the CIA these days which even now must suffer the New Delhi (India) Divine Light Mission's accusation that the CIA has actually brainwashed the 17-year-old Maharaj ji.

The Mafia in general and the Chicago underworld in particular had motives. The CIA didn't , of course. The crime syndicate of yesteryear, before all the new sophisticated electronic bugging came into play, was a slitheringly arrogant combine. It reached everywhere -- repeat, everywhere. It operated in grim certainty that no one was above decision by its "hit" courts.

At the beginning of this script it must be recalled that the late Jack Ruby, once owner of a pre-discotheque Dallas joint, shot and killed assassin Lee Harvey Oswald in the cellar of a Dallas police station. In mob jargon, this was the "cutout." It eliminates the killer, the hit man, the contract gun. Dead men don't sing. So Oswald, to whose grave at least one union official sent flowers, never did get around to brooding and perhaps deciding to disclose personally whether the assassination was a one-man operation or a conspiracy.

Now back to Ruby. Before he became a Dallas saloon keeper, with girls attached, on one of its main drags, Ruby was loosely part of the toughest of underworlds- the Chicago mob. It was then (back in the '30s) and is now operated by Tony Accardo. Sort of Al Capone's successor.

The mob had several account executives in charge of the newly profitable labor rackets which began making up for the big cash lost when the end of prohibition knocked off bootlegging.

So Jack Ruby had a vision in 1937. There always has been money in junk, scrap iron and waste. Why not a union of junk collectors? Ruby lunched with a lawyer friend, Leon Cook. It would be easy to get a federal union charter, Ruby said. Cook agreed. They went into business. Soon the money rolled in. Ruby was secretary. Cook, treasurer. They were good, too. So good, Cook got some slugs in the gut on Dec. 8, 1939, and died weeks later.

Ruby hung round for a while, wondering if bullet poisoning was catching. Then he finally caught the idea. He left for Dallas and opened a joint. Later this was to be the "casing" hangout for Chicago hoods -- like Paul "Needlenose" Labriola who died when the boys decided to cut his breathing off with some tight wire.

But the junk union was too good to waste. So shortly after Ruby was technically removed from office, the AFL Waste Material Handlers Union 20467 was taken over by Paul "Red" Dorfman -- a thick necked tough guy, indeed, who once almost broke my jaw in a corridor of San Francisco's Hotel Fairmount.

I swing the late Red Dorfman into this script to limn the milieu in which Jack Ruby had operated as a small-time, oft-frightened, Chicago thug. Dorfman has a fascinating background. There are few Chicago labor people he didn't know. There also were few Chicago Mafiosi he didn't know. And all by first name. But Dorman's horizons were higher than Chicago. He moved in Washington, Detroit and wherever else there was polictical -- and labor -- power.

He was a buddy of Murder, Inc.'s dead "Longy" Zwillman who had more political power in New Jersey and some national circles than has ever been recorded for some mysterious reason. Red Dorfman was also deep in the usual activities since he always had the nod of Tony Accardo.

There also are links between Dorfman, the restaurant racket hoods, and the whole operation which included "Needlenose" Labriola, who frequented Ruby's hangout in Dallas.

Incidentally, it was in Ruby's joint that the Chicago mob "cased" Dallas and Texas and plotted using the big state as a base for fanning out over Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana. They did very well for a while, and though they scattered and Labriola was murdered, some of their boys are still in business. And they've rarely been probed.

In the federal records one can find the following on Dorfman: "Dorfman is a major figure in the Chicago underworld. He is an associate of most of the leading gangsters in the Chicago area. He is the contact man between dishonest union leaders and members of the Chicago underworld."

Then the record discloses that Dorfman was close to Accardo, Zwillman and at least one member of what is referred to as the Luchese family in the New York garment district.

And Dorfman once said of Ruby, "He is a nice guy." The question then is: with all these contacts Ruby had, was he asked by one of them, or did he get a message, to kill the killer of Jack Kennedy? If so, why? And why did some send flowers to Lee Harvey Oswald's grave?

There's more to contemplate here than in some contrived conspiracy discrediting the CIA.

In our opinion, that kind of political fatalism is mistaken. Obviously, we cannot give any guarantees that controls will not be reimposed. If certainty on that score were possible, that too would be a good reason not to bother writing on the subject-there is no use beating a dead horse. It is because there is uncertainty as to whether the nation will or will not return to controls in the coming months that the issue is worth discussing.

We will go beyond that and venture the opinion that, for at least the coming session of Congress, the odds are against the restoration of a comprehensive wage-price control system.

True, the general public is now overwhelmingly in favor of wage and price controls. That is well established by opinion polls, and it is not at all surprising. When inflation is rampant, the public is prone to take a simplistic view of the way it may be stopped. As the man in the street sees it, if the price level is rising, why doesn't the government simply step in with legislation and regulation that forbids prices to rise? What could be simpler and what are we waiting for?

Does it then follow that elected officials, who must regularly return to the public for reelection, will inevitably bow to the wishes of their constituency and restore controls promptly? The answer is "not necessarily," since there are other forces to be reckoned with.

Public support for controls is support for the controls idea in the abstract. It is always strongest when controls are not in effect. When controls are in effect, no one is ever happy for very long with the particular controls program they have to live with. Equity is always stated as the key objective of the controls system, but there is never agreement as to what constitutes equity. The universal experience with controls is that, not immediately but after an interval, every segment of the population comes to feel that the program is biased against them.

It may be irrelevant to point out that controls have always been an economic failure. But it is certainly relevant to observe that controls have also proved, eventually, to be a political failure in every instance. Politicians who have been identified with controls will, at that point, find it a liability.

One can observe a fairly regular cycle in the public attitude toward controls between the time they are imposed and the time they are abandoned. This is clearly illustrated in the 1971-1974 experience, but it is also evident in other controls episodes here and abroad. At the beginning, when controls are first imposed, they enjoy universal acclaim and support. After about a year that support has begun to erode. After about two years the controls program has lost practically all public support. Consumers, labor, and businessmen are by that time all opposed to the control effort, although for different and conflicting reasons.

The point is that, if a new control effort is mounted within the next few months, the public is likely to approve strongly for, say, the rest of this year. But elected officials will have no opportunity to profit from that public approval, since there is no national election this year. By the time the next national election comes, almost two years from now, the controls program will have had time to fall apart and general public approval may well have been replaced by general public resentment. At least, the risk of this is great enough to give government officials pause.

Of course, elected officials are not likely to describe the situation that way in their public statements. But we believe that enough of them are aware of the danger to give us hope that government actions regarding controls will not be as bad as the speeches of public officials on the same subject.

All this might lead to the thought that, even if we are safe against controls in 1975, 1976 will be the really dangerous period. Controls instituted during the latter year might still enjoy public acclaim on election day and hence might seem a wise political move. But here the economic cycle may come to our rescue. The prospects are that between now and 1976 the economy will be softening. With a softer economy, the rate of inflation will surely be greatly reduced from the two-digit rates of recent experience. It will appear that substantial progress is being made against inflation and the public clamor for controls will be moderated.

To those who agree that controls are an economic abomination our message is: be of good cheer, all is not lost. In the fight against controls this is not a time for complacency but neither is it a time for defeatism. There are some real advantages on our side.

THREE-ACT COMEDY ON BUDGET

Spending by Congress is becoming so excessive that actions on the federal budget sound like Alice's Mad Tea Party.

The new committee in the Senate which is supposed to hold down federal spending is recommending a federal budget of $365 billion for fiscal 1976. This will produce a deficit of about $67.2 billion.

Then, must to demonstrate that the outer limits of spending still have not been reached, Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., proposed a bill loaded with job stimulating programs that would add another $9 billion to the proposed $67.2 billion deficit. This was voted down 64 to 29. End of Act I.

In Act II Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., obviously not playing the game, proposed a measure to cut the projected deficit by $2.2 billion. The Senate defeated this 62 to 33, ignoring Dole's pleas to cut out such things as studies of comic books and Polish bisexual frogs. End of Act II.

Then in Act III, the Senate really showed where it stands on the gut issue of deficit spending. Sen. Jessie Helms, R-N.C., proposed a motion to balance the federal budget.

What an affront! Spenders in the Senate rallied to crush this "radical" who was so bold as to suggest that the federal government not spend more than it receives in taxes and revenues. The vote against this "revolutionary" idea was 75 to 9, or more than 8 to 1 against balancing the budget. End of Act III.

After witnessing this comedy, it seems almost incredible that the nation operated WITHOUT an income tax until 1913, and that when the tax went into effect that year it was only at the rate of 1 per cent. Believe it or not, that tax raised only $100 million its first year — but it was enough for a government which had not yet learned how to spend tax money wildly.

Now, 62 years later, the proposed $365 billion budget is 3,650 times greater than the total receipts from that first year of the income tax. That should tell taxpayers something about how big the government has grown and how the Democratic majority in Congress handles their money.

NEED CLEAR THINKING ABOUT NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE

According to Perspective magazine, the U.S. holds the undisputed world record for health spending. Even so, Congress is still considering expanding into some sort of national health insurance, which would be another step toward socialized medicine.

The Office of Research & Statistics of the Social Security Administration estimates U.S. health spending will pass the $100- billion mark for the first time. For fiscal year 1974, health expense in our nation reached an estimated $104.2 billion.

That's up 10.6 per cent over 1973, a year when "mandatory economic controls were fully in effect for the health industry." And that's a whopping 7.7 per cent of the total gross national production of the nation.

U.S. health spending for FY-1974 represents a new high in per capita spending: $485 for each man, woman and child in America. Far more for the aged; considerably less for the under- 25 half of the population; but $485 on the average for all Americans regardless of age, health condition, economic, geographic or other factors.

The big shift in spending was in the public sector. While private- sector expense as a percentage of total spending was down from 62 per cent to 60.4 per cent, public spending went from 38 per cent to 39.6 per cent... just under 40 per cent of all health dollars. Reason for the big shift are the "substantial increases in expenditures under the Medicare and Medicaid programs," for the aged, the disabled and the poor.

Translated: despite being the only major nation in the world without national health insurance, four out of every 10 health dollars are coming from federal, state and local government, mostly federal.

Hospitals still get the lion's share of total outlay: 39 per cent. In dollars this represents $41 billion for FY-74.

Physicians get a shade less than half that amount: $19 billion.

Druggists are third in ranking: nearly $10 billion.

Nursing homes of all types have now become the fourth biggest recipient of health dollars: $7.5 billion.

After that come dentists ($6 billion), construction ($5 billion) and research ($2.5 billion).

So it is obvious that the American people need to evaluate the costs of government- controlled health insurance proposed in Congress and to use their influence to get what they want and what they are willing to accept taxwise.

Can This Marriage Be Saved?

WASHINGTON - As if Washington did not have enough to worry about, it now, for the umpteenth time, is sweating out consummation of the marriage between its two pet pandas, Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling. Everyone knows that those of us who live in the capital are a long- suffering people, but we're all losing patience with Ksing-Hsing who either doesn't know, or doesn't care, about fulfilling his role as a husband and a father.

Zoo officials have indicated that Ling-Ling not only has been ready but eager to have a baby panda. But he has been unable to get Hsing-Hsing into the hay.

The people in this town are so upset about this state of affairs that they have raised a fund to hire a sex therapist to see if he could do something about Hsing-Hsing's hangups.

His name is Dr. Newlove and he studied under Masters and Johnson before he decided to specialize in sex therapy for pandas.

Dr. Newlove agreed to talk, but warned he would say nothing to violate a physician- patient relationship.

"I would Say Hsing-Hsing is my most interesting case. If you look into his family history, he suffered from an overbearing Mandarin mother and a weak Cantonese father. He also was born right after the Cultural Revolution in China when making love was denounced as a capitalist bourgeois activity to distract the masses. This left a lot of scars on Hsing-Hsing."

"How do you plan to treat him?" I asked the good doctor.

"Slowly," he raplied.

"Why don't you set up a television set in Hsing-Hsing's cage and show X-rated movies?"

"I know you're not going to believe this," Drd. Newlove said, "but pandas do not get turned on my human beings making love. The few times we've shown erotic films to pandas they started throwing orange peels at each other."

"It figures," I said.

"The ideal thing," he said, "would be to get some films of pandas making love to each other, but the only ones who have them are the Chinese and they won't give them to us until we let them take back Taiwan."

"I know this is probably a chauvinist ramark," I said. "but is it possible that Ling-Ling is to blame for Hsing'Hsing's impotence? Maybe she doesn't know how to excite him."

"There is always that possibility. Sometimes the female panda forgets her sensuality and does not look exciting when the male panda comes into the cage. I plan to have several sessions with Ling'-Ling alone, teaching her to be more adventurous and more feeling. So far her idea of love play is to hit Hsing-Hsing over the head with her food bowl. Not all male pandas consider this a prelude to a seduction."

"Have you thought about waterbed?" I ask him.

"I'm having one made now," Dr. Newlove replied. "Also I'm trying to find a perfume that Hsing-Hsing might go for. Apparently, whatever Ling-Ling is using now is not doing the trick."

"It's too bad you can't use a surrogate. wife," I said. "I read that sometimes that helps."

"I would if I could find one. My biggest problem is Hsing'Hsing has no one to compare Ling-Ling with. If I could get some fat, dowdy female panda in the cage, Hsing-Hsing might realize Ling- Ling is rather attrative and he could do a lot worse. But since all he ever sees is Ling-Ling, he takes her for granted . Hsing-Hsing honestly believes Ling-Ling is the only fish in the sea."

"If you can't do it," I told the doctor, "no one can."

"That's nice of you to say." he said modestly. "I know if I could get Hsing-Hsing into the marriage bed just once, he'd turn into a tiger."

Why Clobber CIA? Was Mafia In On Jack Kennedy Assassination?

WASHINGTON -- There's a better case to be made for charges that the Mafia assassinated Jack Kennedy than there is for profitable efforts to implicate Bill Colby's Central Intelligence Agency. It isn't fashionable to write kindly of the CIA these days which even now must suffer the New Delhi (India) Divine Light Mission's accusation that the CIA has actually brainwashed the 17-year- old Maharaj ji.

The Mafia in general and the Chicago underworld in particular had motives. The CIA didn't , of course. The crime syndicate of yesteryear, before all the new sophisticated electronic bugging came into play, was a slitheringly arrogant combine. It reached everywhere -- repeat, everywhere. It operated in grim certainty that no one was above decision by its "hit" courts.

At the beginning of this script it must be recalled that the late Jack Ruby, once owner of a pre-discotheque Dallas joint, shot and killed assassin Lee Harvey Oswald in the cellar of a Dallas police station. In mob jargon, this was the "cutout." It eliminates the killer, the hit man, the contract gun. Dead men don't sing. So Oswald, to whose grave at least one union official sent flowers, never did get around to brooding and perhaps deciding to disclose personally whether the assassination was a one-man operation or a conspiracy.

Now back to Ruby. Before he became a Dallas saloon keeper, with girls attached, on one of its main drags, Ruby was loosely part of the toughest of underworlds- the Chicago mob. It was then (back in the '30s) and is now operated by Tony Accardo. Sort of Al Capone's successor.

The mob had several account executives in charge of the newly profitable labor rackets which began making up for the big cash lost when the end of prohibition knocked off bootlegging.

So Jack Ruby had a vision in 1937. There always has been money in junk, scrap iron and waste. Why not a union of junk collectors? Ruby lunched with a lawyer friend, Leon Cook. It would be easy to get a federal union charter, Ruby said. Cook agreed. They went into business. Soon the money rolled in. Ruby was secretary. Cook, treasurer. They were good, too. So good, Cook got some slugs in the gut on Dec. 8, 1939, and died weeks later.

Ruby hung round for a while, wondering if bullet poisoning was catching. Then he finally caught the idea. He left for Dallas and opened a joint. Later this was to be the "casing" hangout for Chicago hoods -- like Paul "Needlenose" Labriola who died when the boys decided to cut his breathing off with some tight wire.

But the junk union was too good to waste. S o shortly after Ruby was technically removed from office, the AFL Waste Material Handlers Union 20467 was taken over by Paul "Red" Dorfman -- a thick necked tough guy, indeed, who once almost broke my jaw in a corridor of San Francisco's Hotel Fairmount.

I swing the late Red Dorfman into this script to limn the milieu in which Jack Ruby had operated as a small-time, oft-frightened, Chicago thug. Dorfman has a fascinating background. There are few Chicago labor people he didn't know. There also were few Chicago Mafiosi he didn't know. And all by first name. But Dorman's horizons were higher than Chicago. He moved in Washington, Detroit and wherever else there was polictical -- and labor -- power.

He was a buddy of Murder, Inc.'s dead "Longy" Zwillman who had more political power in New Jersey and some national circles than has ever been recorded for some mysterious reason. Red Dorfman was also deep in the usual activities since he always had the nod of Tony Accardo.

There also are links between Dorfman, the restaurant racket hoods, and the whole operation which included "Needlenose" Labriola, who frequented Ruby's hangout in Dallas.

Incidentally, it was in Ruby's joint that the Chicago mob "cased" Dallas and Texas and plotted using the big state as a base for fanning out over Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana. They did very well for a while, and though they scattered and Labriola was murdered, some of their boys are still in business. And they've rarely been probed.

In the federal records one can find the following on Dorfman: "Dorfman is a major figure in the Chicago underworld. He is an associate of most of the leading gangsters in the Chicago area. He is the contact man between dishonest union leaders and members of the Chicago underworld."

Then the record discloses that Dorfman was close to Accardo, Zwillman and at least one member of what is referred to as the Luchese family in the New York garment district.

And Dorfman once said of Ruby, "He is a nice guy." The question then is: with all these contacts Ruby had, was he asked by one of them, or did he get a message, to kill the killer of Jack Kennedy? If so, why? And why did some send flowers to Lee Harvey Oswald's grave?

There's more to contemplate here than in some contrived conspiracy discrediting the CIA.

Did CIA Back Trujillo Death Plot0

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON--Dictator Rafael Trujillo was gunned down on May 30, 1961, thus ending his 31-year tyranny over the Dominican Republic. His military police efficiently rounded up the assassins and tortured them to death.

We have now learned that before they died, they gave detailed confessions implicating the Central Intelligence Agency in the assassination plot. The tortured men believed the CIA not only supported them but would save them.

According to their confession, the CIA was supposed to prevent the old tyrant's murderous son, Ramfis, from returning to Santo Domingo. Nevertheless, he flew home in a chartered plane and personally directed the torture.

His father had been bushwhacked on a lonely highway by a few military and civilian marksmen, backed by a conspiracy of 20 to 40 others, with supporters in the hundreds. The military security forces hauled in dozens--some say hundreds--for torture. From their agonized confessions, a detailed summary was written and presented to Ramfis, who has since died.

The existence of the summnary, however, is attested to by sources close to the surviving Trujillo family members. We have also been in contact with the family itself, but they refuse to discuss the CIA's role in the assassination.

They would say only that they regret Rafael Trujillo was not informed by the CIA of the plot against him. "After all, he was not an enemy. He should have been told," a family spokesman said.

One Trujillista veteran, now a respected businessman, acknowledged that he had helped compile the summary. "The CIA helped get the guns and gave the plotters encouragement," he said in a statement to us.

He charged that the plotters "were urged on by Lear Reed," a former U.S. embassy aide in Santo Domingo, who was regarded by his colleagues as a CIA man, but left the Dominican Republic about eight months before the assassination.

After Reed left, according to the death-throes confessions of the assassins, they kept close contact with two U.S. diplomats whom they call "Mutt" and "Jeff" after the tall and short comic strip characters.

Messages were carried from the plotters to the CIA, according to the tortured men's last words by a brave young Dominican pediatrician, Dr. Robert Reid. After the assassination, he hid three of the plotters. When the secret police closed in, the doctor committed suicide.

"The assassins believed that the CIA was going to head off Ramfis..." claims the former Trujillo aide. "But he chartered a plane and got back to Santo Domingo in time to take over the old man's apparatus. I can't swear that the CIA ever tried to delay Ramfis, but the plotters under torture--and it was very, very ugly--swore they'd never have killed Trujillo unless they thought the CIA was going to save their skins somehow."

Footnote: U.S. intelligence sources confirm they were aware of the plot and kept abreast of it in a general way. But they deny that the CIA was a direct participant. Lear Reed has died. One of the surviving conspirators, Gen. Antonio "Tony" Imbert has also denied that the CIA helped him kill Trujillo. But denials or not, the tortured men thought they had U.S. approval and they expected U.S. help.

PUFF BAGS: Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., is making a behind-the-scenes attempt to obtain White House tapes which he suspects may prove President Nixon sold out air bag safety to Detroit's auto makers.

The puff bags, according to federal data, would save 10,000 lives a year, prevent countless injuries and save the nation's drivers and insurance companies $4 billion annually in hospital and other costs.

But Ford and Chrysler have fought strenuously against the bags for years, General Motors has been lukewarm and now President Ford is personally wavering on the devices.

In a private letter to Special Watergate prosecutor Henry Ruth, Moss, as House Commerce Investigations chairman, suggests that meetings between the White House and Ford and Chrysler officials may be behind the air bags' political problems.

Hoping to get Watergate-style dialogue on the secret talks, Moss asked Ruth to "review White House tapes...to determine whether conversations took place (on) air bag standards."

The tapes are presently tied up in the courts.

But in 1971, we told of an April 27, 1971, meeting between Henry Ford II and Nixon involving auto safety. A confidential Moss subcommittee memo now says this meeting and others were held amid "talk of Henry Ford (playing) a role on behalf of Nixon's re-election."

After one meeting, attended by White House aide John Ehrlichman, Transportation Secretary John Volpe "retired with the White House staff" and later told a top aide, "We are in trouble on the air bag..."

Volpe was right. The White House shelved the air bag for at least five years by replacing it "temporarily" with the ill-fated starter interlock belt system which was installed on 1974 cars. It was so unpopular with drivers it was scuttled.

A few days ago, falling in line with his predecessor, President Ford bucked his own Transportation Department experts and questioned whether the air bag was "cost-effective."

Footnote: The Transportation Department plans hearings on air bags in a few days, once again with heated auto industry opposition to the safety device.

EAST PRAIRIE — Ten students from East Prairie High School have been selected for membership in the Society of Distinquished American High School Students.

Receiving the honor were Luann Allen, Tony Blumenberg, Claudetta Hawkins, Steve Lingle, Linda Aydelott, Rita Newman, David Brumley, Tracy Emory, Perry Jones and Richard Thurmond.

The students are now participatng in the society's annual awards program, which offers approximately $800,000 in college scholarships over a four-year college tenure. The scholarships consist of unrestricted merit awards and renewable annual scholarships to leading colleges and universities across the nation. The society's national awards program is the largest of its kind in the country.

The awards program is one means the society uses to promote academic achievement and civic responsibility on the part of American youth. These students are also recognized nationally in an annually published volume, "The Society of Distinquished American High School Students", which is distributed across the nation.

Principals and counselors of high schools submit to the society each year a limited number of their top students. The society then honors only those young men and women who have distinguished themselves as the highest achievers.

Lawayne Law, the high school principal, said, "This is a high honor indeed and one of which these students and their parents may be proud of throughout their lives."

American pull-out in Laos begun

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The U. S. government is beginning to pull Americans out of Laos because of growing anti-Americanism that is accompanying the spreading Communist domination of the country.

A State Department spokesman in Washington said the U.S. Embassy staff will be reduced, and all American officials stationed in the provinces have been called to Vientiane. He said there are no plans to close the embassy, but plans for the evacuation of all its staff have been brought up to date since the Communist Pathet Lao began to take over.

Last Friday a student mob stoned the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane. On Wednesday mobs ransacked offices of the U.S. Agency for International Development in Luang Prabang, the royal capital 200 miles north of Vientiane, and in Savannakhet, on the Mekong river 230 miles southeast of Vientiane.

Three of the 15 Americans in Savannakhet were taken prisoner, the embassy said, but they were reported unharmed and being held in the provincial governor's house.

U.S. Charge d'Affaires Christian A. Chapman presented an official protest to Premier Souvanna Phouma, and the government said it was sending a team to Savannakhet to investigate.

The awards program is one means the society uses to promote academic achievement and civic responsibility on the part of American youth. These students are also recognized nationally in an annually published volume, "The Society of Distinquished American High School Students", which is distributed across the nation.

Principals and counselors of high schools submit to the society each year a limited number of their top students. The society then honors only those young men and women who have distinguished themselves as the highest achievers.

Lawayne Law, the high school principal, said, "This is a high honor indeed and one of which these students and their parents may be proud of throughout their lives."

American pull-out in Laos begun

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The U. S. government is beginning to pull Americans out of Laos because of growing anti-Americanism that is accompanying the spreading Communist domination of the country.

A State Department spokesman in Washington said the U.S. Embassy staff will be reduced, and all American officials stationed in the provinces have been called to Vientiane. He said there are no plans to close the embassy, but plans for the evacuation of all its staff have been brought up to date since the Communist Pathet Lao began to take over.

Last Friday a student mob stoned the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane. On Wednesday mobs ransacked offices of the U.S. Agency for International Development in Luang Prabang, the royal capital 200 miles north of Vientiane, and in Savannakhet, on the Mekong river 230 miles southeast of Vientiane.

Three of the 15 Americans in Savannakhet were taken prisoner, the embassy said, but they were reported unharmed and being held in the provincial governor's house.

U.S. Charge d'Affaires Christian A. Chapman presented an official protest to Premier Souvanna Phouma, and the government said it was sending a team to Savannakhet to investigate.

Who needs a man?

Guide teaches women the art of home repair

A refrigerator light shorting out, a kitchen sink spraying you in the face or an overflowing, stopped-up bathroom sink can cause havoc in your life, if not frustration, with a husband who somehow never has time to fix anything.

Well....."The you don't need a man to fix it book--The Woman's Guide to Confident Home Repair" by Jim Webb and Bart Houseman may end your frustration and perhaps save a marriage. As columnist Erma Bombeck asks in an introduction, "This is the book that asks the question: "Did you marry for love....or just to get your toilet fixed?"

If not a pesky toilet, how about a drain that stops draining? The guide suggests these steps: Your first move should be to take a look at the drain plug, if there is one. Ten to one it is removable simply by lifting or by twisting in one direction or the other while lifting or by unscrewing counterclockwise. Use your hands and don't be afraid to get rough with it. If it's the pull-out type and you had to work pretty hard to get it out, probably it was bound by hair around the bottom. Once it is out, remove the debris and clean the plug with an abrasive cleaner. Before you put it back, turn on the water; and if it drains freely, you have it made. If not, or it is the kitchen sink or laundry tub, try "the gentle approach."

Gentle Approach

The force cup is much better known as the "plunger" or the "plumber's friend" and it can be yours too. Although nothing but a rubber hemisphere on the end of a wooden stick, it can exert a whopping force--pull as well as push--on a water-filled, plugged drain. Wad wet cloth and stuff it into the overflow holes directly above the main drain (or sometimes under the lip inside the front of the bowl) to make a seal. Remove the drain plug. Most bathroom drain plugs can be removed by twisting them (by hand) approximately 90 degrees in one direction or the other (usually counterclockwise).

After completing this step and with some water in the bowl, cover the main drain hole with the rubber hemisphere of the force cup and plunge the handle straight down and then pull it straight up. The suction resulting from the upward pull is frequently more effective than the plunging action. Do not be surprised if all sort of mess is pulled up into the bowl in the process. This is a good sign that you are getting somewhere. Keep going for a minute or so. If the position of the drain hole or the shape of the bowl make it difficult to seat the rubber hemisphere, a coat of petroleum jelly on the bottom edge of the latter may help. When you remove the plunger, and water rushes out of the bowl, you have won. If not, another approach is "The Trap Trick."

Fix it yourself

This is a photo of a human being fixing a stopped-up drain. This human being is a woman. She was raised to believe that she was helpless and that only men can fix things. Now a guide teaches women minor home repairs.

Trap Trick

That chrome plated, U-shaped pipe under the lavatory holds a little water at the bottom of the bend which keeps sewer odors where they belong--not in the house. It also catches diamond rings, bobby pins and other goodies--as well as cotton swabs, pieces of cotton and bunches of hair, all of which add up to a plug in the trap. In the unlikely event that plunging had not done the trick, one absolutely sure cure is to remove the trap and clean it. And it is no big deal either.

It is possible, though not probable, that there will be a large square plug at the very bottom of the U-bend. If so, wrap it with tape (masking, adhesive or plastic) to prevent scratches in the chrome plate, put a container underneath to catch the water and remove the plug by turning it counterclockwise (when viewed from beneath) with your crescent or monkey wrench. (Both these wrenches have jaws with flat faces. Don't use a wrench with grooves in the faces.) With your finger, you should be able to feel anything causing a stoppage. Fish it out, replace the plug and check it for a leak. Retighten if necessary and remove the tape.

Unfortunately, most traps do not have a plug but the whole trap can be removed easily. On either side of the U-bend you will see hexagonal chrome rings which unscrew to release the trap. Again, with the water catcher in place and the hexagonal rings wrapped with tape, unscrew them all the way and pull down on the trap to remove it. Clean it out thoroughly (an abrasive cleaner and an old toothbrush are ideal), check the rubber gasket in each ring and replace the trap. If the gasket is beat up, take the trap to the hardware store and replace both gaskets. Usually the hexagonal rings do not have to be extremely tight to prevent leaks.

Faucet Fizzle

When a faucet does everything but gush, it may be typical of those faucets manufactured since 1955. They are equipped with a cylindrical gadget called an aerator threaded onto the end of the spout. Its function is to minimize splashing by forcing air to mix with the flowing water. Unfortunately, tiny pieces of sand and other matter carried by the water get trapped in the aerator and begin to reduce the flow. Because the aerator works by forcing the water through very fine holes, three or four specks of sand are enough to reduce water flow by 30 per cent or more. So, if you have the feeling that once upon a time your faucet delivered more water in a more even stream than it does now, the time has arrived to clean the aerator.

Using your hands, turn the aerator clockwise (when looking from above) to loosen it. If it does not budge, dry it wrap it with a layer of adhesive tape and try again. If it still refuses to turn, wrap it with another layer of tape (to protect the chrome finish) and use pliers. When it does come off, you will find a rubber or composition washer, a brass or plastic plate with small holes and one or more brass screens. Clean each part with an old toothbrush and abrasive cleaner, then reassemble the pieces as you found them. If the screen is missing, the washer is rotten and things are generally in foul shape, replace the whole aerator; it is inexpensive.

Doing it yourself will make you feel better.

Mrs. Onassis to change name back to Kennedy

LONDON (AP) - Jacqueline Onassis has told friends she is planning to change her name back to Kennedy, the gossip columnist of the London Daily Express reports.

The column said the widow of Greek shipping tycoon Aristotle Onassis and of President John F. Kennedy wants "to ensure that her name passes into legend bearing the more historical associations of her first marriage."

The "move is motivated by her loyalty to the Kennedy name rather than by disloyalty to her memory of Onassis," the Express said.

"It will also help her considerably if she pursues her often-stated ambition to involve herself once more in American politics."

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I purchased a leather handbag and then discovered one rainy day that it had a large water spot on it. What can I do? — SHARON.

DEAR SHARON — I presume you mean a real leather handbag. A professional leather cleaner told me that when such a spot is not too old it often can be eliminated by going over the entire bag with a damp cloth to blend it out, dampening the spot a bit more than the rest of the bag. Success is determined by whether or not the spot has penetrated through to the skin. All such leather is treated.After a bag is clean it has to be resurfaced and sometimes recoloring is needed to hide spots. — POLLY.

Ann Landers

Professional virgins called sadists

Dear Ann Landers: I was fascinated by the letter about the "Professional Virgin." My best friend is one and I think it's lousy. She's a wonderful gal in many ways, but when it comes to sex she's off her rocker. I believe the girl is a sadist. She loves to lead guys on--giving them every reason to think they'll score. When things get to the boiling point, she lowers the boom, feigns indignation and announces, "I'm not that kind of a girl!"

Although a medical examination would prove she has everything she was born with, I'd say her behavior is far from virginal. When she describes how far she goes, I find it difficult to understand what she thinks she's saving by not completing the act.

Comment, please.. I'd love for her and others who behave this way to see it in print.--Out With The Teasers

Dear Out: Your friend, and other "professional virgins" who make such a big issue over a little tissue, are kidding themselves. Although they might be clinically "intact" they really haven't saved much in the way of personal integrity, reputation or anything else. I agree with you--they ARE sadistic.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to this wonderful man for four months. It is my first marriage (I'm in my late 20s) and Jack's second. He was widowed after having been married for 18 years--so you see he is several years my senior.

It seems whenever Jack introduces me to anyone he says, "Meet my new wife." This bothers me. I don't feel it's necessary that I be introduced as "new." I've mentioned this to Jack at least three times but he seems to forget. What can I do to get the idea across?--Antics With Semantics

Dear Ant: Forget it. It's no big deal. Jack will probably drop that irritating word within the year. In the meantime I can't see that any harm is being done.

When he begins to introduce you as his OLD wife, then you'll have something to complain about.

Dear Ann Landers: I have to laugh the way people who write to you have divided themselves into two camps--cat lovers, who are invariable dog haters, and dog lovers, who can't stand cats.

Actually, I don't mind either cats or dogs. It's children I find intolerable. Why has so little been written on this subject--considering our society has become completely child-dominated?

More and more I meet people who share my disgust at the way our nation's little monsters are let loose to ruin rugs, furniture, lawns, parks, public buildings, and even marriages.

I've been in homes where parents have allowed their children to take over the conversation, argue with adult guests, and use language which I consider insolent. And have you noticed how many children are permitted to answer the phone and ask, "Who is this?"

You might consider me an oddball, but there are more of us around than you think. I hope the parents who read your column give this matter some thought.--Upstate N.Y.

Dear Up: Well!!! I'm glad you radioed your position, Dad. I'll keep my grandchildren away from YOUR neck of the woods.

Who needs a man?

Guide teaches women the art of home repair

A refrigerator light shorting out, a kitchen sink spraying you in the face or an overflowing, stopped-up bathroom sink can cause havoc in your life, if not frustration, with a husband who somehow never has time to fix anything.

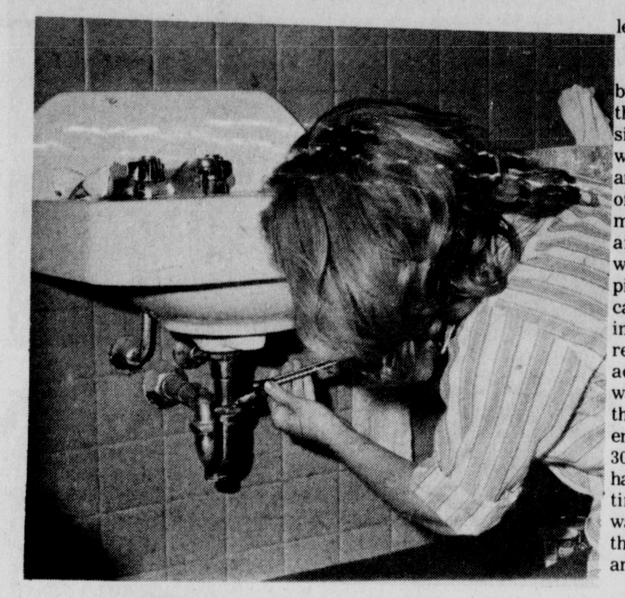
Well....."The you don't need a man to fix it book--The Woman's Guide to Confident Home Repair" by Jim Webb and Bart Houseman may end your frustration and perhaps save a marriage. As columnist Erma Bombeck asks in an introduction, "This is the book that asks the question: "Did you marry for love....or just to get your toilet fixed?"

If not a pesky toilet, how about a drain that stops draining? The guide suggests these steps: Your first move should be to take a look at the drain plug, if there is one. Ten to one it is removable simply by lifting or by twisting in one direction or the other while lifting or by unscrewing counterclockwise. Use your hands and don't be afraid to get rough with it. If it's the pull-out type and you had to work pretty hard to get it out, probably it was bound by hair around the bottom. Once it is out, remove the debris and clean the plug with an abrasive cleaner. Before you put it back, turn on the water; and if it drains freely, you have it made. If not, or it is the kitchen sink or laundry tub, try "the gentle approach."

Gentle Approach

The force cup is much better known as the "plunger" or the "plumber's friend" and it can be yours too. Although nothing but a rubber hemisphere on the end of a wooden stick, it can exert a whopping force--pull as well as push--on a water-filled, plugged drain. Wad wet cloth and stuff it into the overflow holes directly above the main drain (or sometimes under the lip inside the front of the bowl) to make a seal. Remove the drain plug. Most bathroom drain plugs can be removed by twisting them (by hand) approximately 90 degrees in one direction or the other (usually counterclockwise).

After completing this step and with some water in the bowl, cover the main drain hole with the rubber hemisphere of the force cup and plunge the handle straight down and then pull it straight up. The suction resulting from the upward pull is frequently more effective than the plunging action. Do not be surprised if all sort of mess is pulled up into the bowl in the process. This is a good sign that you are getting somewhere. Keep going for a minute or so. If the position of the drain hole or the shape of the bowl make it difficult to seat the rubber hemisphere, a coat of petroleum jelly on the bottom edge of the latter may help. When you remove the plunger, and water rushes out of the bowl, you have won. If not, another approach is "The Trap Trick."



Fix it yourself

This is a photo of a human being fixing a stopped-up drain. This human being is a woman. She was raised to believe that she was helpless and that only men can fix things. Now a guide teaches women minor home repairs.

Trap Trick

That chrome plated, U-shaped pipe under the lavatory holds a little water at the bottom of the bend which keeps sewer odors where they belong--not in the house. It also catches diamond rings, bobby pins and other goodies--as well as cotton swabs, pieces of cotton and bunches of hair, all of which add up to a plug in the trap. In the unlikely event that plunging had not done the trick, one absolutely sure cure is to remove the trap and clean it. And it is no big deal either.

It is possible, though not probable, that there will be a large square plug at the very bottom of the U-bend. If so, wrap it with tape (masking, adhesive or plastic) to prevent scratches in the chrome plate, put a container underneath to catch the water and remove the plug by turning it counterclockwise (when viewed from beneath) with your crescent or monkey wrench. (Both these wrenches have jaws with flat faces. Don't use a wrench with grooves in the faces.) With your finger, you should be able to feel anything causing a stoppage. Fish it out, replace the plug and check it for a leak. Retighten if necessary and remove the tape.

Unfortunately, most traps do not have a plug but the whole trap can be removed easily. On either side of the U-bend you will see hexagonal chrome rings which unscrew to release the trap. Again, with the water catcher in place and the hexagonal rings wrapped with tape, unscrew them all the way and pull down on the trap to remove it. Clean it out thoroughly (an abrasive cleaner and an old toothbrush are ideal), check the rubber gasket in each ring and replace the trap. If the gasket is beat up, take the trap to the hardware store and replace both gaskets. Usually the hexagonal rings do not have to be extremely tight to prevent leaks.

When a faucet does everything but gush, it may be typical of those faucets manufactured since 1955. They are equipped with a cylindrical gadget called an aerator threaded onto the end of the spout. When it does come off, you will find a rubber or composition washer, a brass or plastic plate with small holes and one or more brass screens. Clean each part with an old toothbrush and abrasive cleaner, then reassemble the pieces as you found them. If the screen is missing, the washer is rotten and things are generally in foul shape, replace the whole aerator; it is inexpensive.

New state record in special Olympics

Imagine yourself in the stadium at Fort Leonard Wood. It was May 8, 7:30 P.M. and Missuri's Special Olympics -- 1975, sponsored by the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation and the Missouri Department of Mental Health, had begun. A parade of athletes moved around the track with marching bands, color guards, banners and distinctive uniforms.

More than 2,000 mentally retarded children and adults were marching. Thirty-three representatives from the nine county Sikeston Region IX were with them. All were eager for the competition to begin.

President Pro-Tem of the Missuri Senate, the Commanding General, Chairman of the State Advisory Committee on Developmental Disabilities, Members of the State Special Olympics Committee, parents, relatives,friends watched from the stands with pride as the children passed in review. Hundreds of military and civilian volunteers were there to serve as officials, coaches, trainers, chaperons, timekeepers, clerks, secretaries, parade marshalls, medical and first aid personnel. couriers, and publicists. Famous athletes were present to give inspirational leadership and guidance to the Special Olympians.

When the parade ended there was a brief opening ceremony which consisted of an invocation, a welcome, and the reciting by all present the Special Olympics oath: "Let M Win, But If I Cannot Win, "Let Me Be Brave in The Attempt."

The track was cleared and the 440 yard relays began. It was exciting! Many heats were conducted to accomodate numerous teams in various age brackets. The boys team from Sikeston Region placedfirst with a record time of 52.3 seconds. This team consisted of Willie Brown (Matthews), Sylvester Dorsey (Lilbourn), Leon Gates (Matthews), and Curtis Washington (Lilbourn).

Fort Leonard Wood provided housing and food for the Olympians. Military personnel served as escorts and provided for the needs of their special guests in a first class manner.

Friday the games continued all day. Curtis Washington (Lilbourn) set a new Special Olympics 220 yard dash record with a time of 0.24. Other events were 50 yard dash, high jump, (Rosie Morris (Benton) set a record of 6'8" standing jump) long jump, softball throw, basketball, volleyball, free exercise, tumbling, swimming, diving, floor hockey and wheelchair races. A delicious lunch was served to all delegations by six army field kitchens in a nearby park.

Friday evening a huge party was held for all participants at a centrally located field house on the base. Two bands provided country and popular music.

Saturday morning basketball and volleyball playoffs were conducted. Sikeston Region boys won first plade in basketball competition. The girl volieyball team placed third. Jays claim 5

Coach Mitch Haskins' Charleston Bluejays baseball team claimed their fourth and fifth wins in a row early this week when they thumped Oran and Delta in Scott-Mississippi league play.

The Jays got a pair of top pitching performances in running their season record to 8-5. Dan Bailey hurled a one shutout as the Jays took Oran 9-0. Baily fanned seven and walked one while allowing Lynn Burhson the lone safety. Don Hatchell scattered four hits in defeating Delta 8-1.

Charlie McMurray, Hatchell and Baily paced the CHS batsmen in the opening encounter, collecting two hits apiece. McMurray had the game only extra base alarm -- a first inning triple. Willie Johnson, Monte Ayers and Bailey had two runs battled in respectively.

Charleston used a 12-hit barrage led by John McMikle's four safeties, to thump Delta. The four hit performance raised the junior second sacker's batting average to a hefty .439. Hatchell went two for four and had three RBI's while lifting his season batting mark to .472. Ayers had two hits and two RBI's and Ron Mix collected a pair of runs batted in.

The Jays opened the scoring with a single tally in the first inning and added runs in the fourth and fifth while the Bobcats booked their unearned score in the fifth. CHS put the game away with a five run outburst in the top ofthe seventh.

Charleston was expected to play Cairo, Ill. this afternoon in the season final.

New state record in special Olympics

Imagine yourself in the stadium at Fort Leonard Wood. It was May 8, 7:30 P.M. and Missuri's Special Olympics -- 1975, sponsored by the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation and the Missouri Department of Mental Health, had begun. A parade of athletes moved around the track with marching bands, color guards, banners and distinctive uniforms.

More than 2,000 mentally retarded children and adults were marching. Thirty-three representatives from the nine county Sikeston Region IX were with them. All were eager for the competition to begin.

President Pro-Tem of the Missuri Senate, the Commanding General, Chairman of the State Advisory Committee on Developmental Disabilities, Members of the State Special Olympics Committee, parents, relatives,friends watched from the stands with pride as the children passed in review. Hundreds of military and civilian volunteers were there to serve as officials, coaches, trainers, chaperons, timekeepers, clerks, secretaries, parade marshalls, medical and first aid personnel. couriers, and publicists. Famous athletes were present to give inspirational leadership and guidance to the Special Olympians.

When the parade ended there was a brief opening ceremony which consisted of an invocation, a welcome, and the reciting by all present the Special Olympics oath: "Let M Win, But If I Cannot Win, "Let Me Be Brave in The Attempt."

The track was cleared and the 440 yard relays began. It was exciting! Many heats were conducted to accomodate numerous teams in various age brackets. The boys team from Sikeston Region placedfirst with a record time of 52.3 seconds. This team consisted of Willie Brown (Matthews), Sylvester Dorsey (Lilbourn), Leon Gates (Matthews), and Curtis Washington (Lilbourn).

Fort Leonard Wood provided housing and food for the Olympians. Military personnel served as escorts and provided for the needs of their special guests in a first class manner.

Friday the games continued all day. Curtis Washington (Lilbourn) set a new Special Olympics 220 yard dash record with a time of 0.24. Other events were 50 yard dash, high jump, (Rosie Morris (Benton) set a record of 6'8" standing jump) long jump, softball throw, basketball, volleyball, free exercise, tumbling, swimming, diving, floor hockey and wheelchair races. A delicious lunch was served to all delegations by six army field kitchens in a nearby park.

Friday evening a huge party was held for all participants at a centrally located field house on the base. Two bands provided country and popular music.

Saturday morning basketball and volleyball playoffs were conducted. Sikeston Region boys won first plade in basketball competition. The girl volleyball team placed third. Jays claim 5

Coach Mitch Haskins' Charleston Bluejays baseball team claimed their fourth and fifth wins in a row early this week when they thumped Oran and Delta in Scott-Mississippi league play.

The Jays got a pair of top pitching performances in running their season record to 8-5. Dan Bailey hurled a one shutout as the Jays took Oran 9-0. Baily fanned seven and walked one while allowing Lynn Burlison the lone safety. Don Hatchell scattered four hits in defeating Delta 8-1.

Charlie McMurray, Hatchell and Baily paced the CHS batsmen in the opening encounter, collecting two hits apiece. McMurray had the game only extra base alarm -- a first inning triple. Willie Johnson, Monte Ayers and Bailey had two runs battled in respectively.

Charleston used a 12-hit barrage led by John McMikle's four safeties, to thump Delta. The four hit performance raised the junior second sacker's batting average to a hefty .439. Hatchell went two for four and had three RBI's while lifting his season batting mark to .472. Ayers had two hits and two RBI's and Ron Mix collected a pair of runs batted in.

The Jays opened the scoring with a single tally in the first inning and added runs in the fourth and fifth while the Bobcats booked their unearned score in the fifth. CHS put the game away with a five run outburst in the top ofthe seventh.

Charleston was expected to play Cairo, Ill. this afternoon in the season final.

Hrabosky calms Dodgers threat

ST. LOUIS (AP)—For a pitcher with doubts, Al Hrabosky let little of his emotion show through to his rivals.

And, if asked, the Los Angeles Dodgers would be happy to attest to the chunky left-hander's fitness in a 7-4 St. Louis Cardinals triumph Wednesday.

"A couple of days ago my arm was stiff in the bullpen," confided Hrabosky, who was called on in his 15th Cardinal appearance to halt the Dodgers in the seventh inning.

"I just tried to be very fluid out there and do everything right mechanically," he said. "You get the adrenalin going, but I wasn't trying to overthrow."

The 25-year-old Hrabosky, an overnight relief sensation a year ago in the National League, was overpowering while permitting only Steve Garvey's double in his 2 1-3 innings against the Dodgers.

And, while reducing his earned run average to 1.71 in 22 innings, he struck out five to put his pace well ahead of 1974.

"Mentally, it's 2,000 per cent ahead of last year," said Hrabosky, who survived a brief streak of wildness and two walks to record his fifth save of the young season.

"I didn't know where I was at this time last year," recalled the mustachioed pitcher, who finished the campaign with an 8-1 record after a rocky start.

"I'd get in a game, and I couldn't concentrate," he added. "But right now I've got the velocity I want. If I can keep it, then I'm there."

Another Cards left-hander, John Curtis, had held Los Angeles to a single earned run and led 6-3 prior to weakening in the seventh.

But Curtis, 2-1, walked Dave Lopes to kindle Dodger hopes and surrendered a single to Lee Lacy before giving way to Mike Garman.

Garman promptly walked Jim Wynn to fill the bases, then Garvey blasted a sacrifice fly to precede Ron Cey's pop foul.

After Willie Crawford was announced to hit for Tom Paciorek, in came Hrabosky from the bullpen and the Dodgers countered with Joe Ferguson, who fanned on three pitches.

"I feel better when it's a game situation," said Hrabosky, who also fanned Ferguson for the game's final out. "I hated it the other day when it was 11-3 or something. The only thing you can do is get hurt."

"He's a fantastic pitcher," insisted Curtis, whose leadoff single ignited a five-run Cards burst in the third against Los Angeles' Doug Rau, 5-2.

"No matter how many days in a row the guy's pitched, he comes running in out of the bullpen," Curtis said. "He picks up the whole ball club with his aggressiveness."

Hrabosky calms Dodgers threat

ST. LOUIS (AP)—For a pitcher with doubts, Al Hrabosky let little of his emotion show through to his rivals.

And, if asked, the Los Angeles Dodgers would be happy to attest to the chunky left-hander's fitness in a 7-4 St. Louis Cardinals triumph Wednesday.

"A couple of days ago my arm was stiff in the bullpen," confided Hrabosky, who was called on in his 15th Cardinal appearance to halt the Dodgers in the seventh inning.

"I just tried to be very fluid out there and do everything right mechanically," he said. "You get the adrenalin going, but I wasn't trying to overthrow."

The 25-year-old Hrabosky, an overnight relief sensation a year ago in the National League, was overpowering while permitting only Steve Garvey's double in his 2 1-3 innings against the Dodgers.

And, while reducing his earned run average to 1.71 in 22 innings, he struck out five to put his pace well ahead of 1974.

"Mentally, it's 2,000 per cent ahead of last year," said Hrabosky, who survived a brief streak of wildness and two walks to record his fifth save of the young season.

"I didn't know where I was at this time last year," recalled the mustachioed pitcher, who finished the campaign with an 8-1 record after a rocky start.

"I'd get in a game, and I couldn't concentrate," he added. "But right now I've got the velocity I want. If I can keep it, then I'm there."

Another Cards left-hander, John Curtis, had held Los Angeles to a single earned run and led 6-3 prior to weakening in the seventh.

But Curtis, 2-1, walked Dave Lopes to kindle Dodger hopes and surrendered a single to Lee Lacy before giving way to Mike Garman.

Garman promptly walked Jim Wynn to fill the bases, then Garvey blasted a sacrifice fly to precede Ron Cey's pop foul.

After Willie Crawford was announced to hit for Tom Paciorek, in came Hrabosky from the bullpen and the Dodgers countered with Joe Ferguson, who fanned on three pitches.

"I feel better when it's a game situation," said Hrabosky, who also fanned Ferguson for the game's final out. "I hated it the other day when it was 11-3 or something. The only thing you can do is get hurt."

"He's a fantastic pitcher," insisted Curtis, whose leadoff single ignited a five-run Cards burst in the third against Los Angeles' Doug Rau, 5-2.

"No matter how many days in a row the guy's pitched, he comes running in out of the bullpen," Curtis said. "He picks up the whole ball club with his aggressiveness."

Blair hurls 1-hitter

Security National Bank rode the one-hit pitching of Bob Blair to their fourth straight Southeast Missouri Softball league triumph Wednesday night and remained atop the league standings via their 8-0 victory over the Cape Girardeau Mets.

In other league action, Kelso edged Vanduser 2-1; New Hamburg Blues handed the Cape Girardeau A's their first defeat 5-1; Oran slipped past New Hamburg Blues 3-2 in eight innings and Scott City blanked Benton 3-0.

Blair had a perfect game going for three innings, retiring the first nine batters he faced before Bob Cook spoiled things. It was the only hit that the Mets got on the night as Blair retired the nextsix batters to end the game with six strikeouts and faced only 16 batters in five innings.

The Bank got on the scoreboard in the first inning and added two more in the second andthird and three in the fifth.

David Pyles tripled to open the game for Security National and scored on Bill Reid's sacrifice for the only tally the Bank needed.

David Pearson and Bob Kindle paced the Bank's eight hit attack. Pearson connected for two doubles.

Vanduser blew a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the sixth when Kelso sent two unearned runs across the plate for a 2-1 victory at home.

Charlie Dye tripled to start the game for Vanduser and scored on Harold Graviett's single. That score held up until the last of the sixth when Rick O'Donnell tired and fell victim to some tough calls and errors.

Kenny Russell claimed the victory in relief.

Kelso managed only one hit on the night and Vanduser three. Kelso's two runs came on no-hits.

CLEVELAND (AP)—Tightend Jim Thaxton was traded by the Cleveland Browns to the Oakland Raiders Wednesday for a future draft choice.

Rookie races against time

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)— If there ever was a story with a happy ending, it's the Saga of Jerry Sneva's rookie driving test.

The last day of practice that rookies could complete driving tests, clearing them to compete for a starting spot in the May 25 Indianapolis, was Wednesday at 5 p.m.

The 25-year-old brother of driver Tom Sneva, who has already qualified at McLaren for a second-row start, started Wednesday with a race car only partially reassembled after Mike Hiss crashed it in practice last week.

Enter big Ed Sneva, the father of Tom and Jerry, who took a vacation to watch his sons. Big Ed strapped on a shop apron and went to work with the fellows trying to get the car ready.

"I don't like to stand around," said Ed, a former race driver. "Especially when it comes to helping one of my boys."

As the afternoon wore on, the car slowly took shape. The one-of-a-kind nose cone on the three-year-old Kingfish chassis had been destroyed in the accident. So a new one was fashioned out of sheets of aluminum and tape-not exactly the mostly refined piece of equipment.

Of the four 10-lap phases of the test around the 2½-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway oval, Jerry had completed one, at 160 miles per hour. He still had the phases at 165, 170 and 170-plus miles per hour.

As 5 p.m. rolled around, chief steward Tom Binford, understanding the frantic work going on, gave the Sneva clan an extension.

"But only to 6 p.m.," he said. "If you're through with at least two more phases by then, we can't do anything else for you."

Finally the machine was filled with fuel, fellow driver Larry Cannon took the car out for two shakedown laps, then turned it over to Jerry.

And after a couple of very unscientific adjustments to raise the new nose cone off the ground, he was away-at 5:45 p.m.

Brother Tom joined the test crew and gave Jerry speed signals as he passed.

With no warmup, no practice and very little time ever in an Indianapolis-type car-which has no speedometer-Jerry turned out 20 steady laps at stages from 165 m.p.h. to 175 m.p.h.

The last lap was completed just as the yellow light closing the track for the day went on. He cut it so close on fuel that he ran out on the backstretch and coasted slowly back in.

Jerry was scheduled to complete the final phase, which is observed and graded by fellow drivers, Thursday.

Preakness draws 10-horse field

BALTIMORE (AP) — Foolish Pleasure, the Kentucky Derby winner, and nine rivals posing a threat to his Triple Crown chances were expected to be entered today in the 100th running of the $150,000-added Preakness Stakes.

Owners of the 10 colts, who already have paid $100 nomination fees, faced a charge of $1,000 to pass the entry box and another $1,000 to start in the 1 3-16 mile classic at Pimlico Race Course on Saturday.

With two owners ready to pay another $10,000 each in supplementary entry fees, since their colts were not nominated, the race would gross a record $210,600 and the winner would get a record $158,100.

Bold Chapeau, one of three entries rated at 20-1 by Pimlico oddsmaker Earle Hart, became the first official entry Wednesday.

Fred Wyble, trainer and part-owner of Bold Chapeau, called in the entry by telephone from his home in Opelousas, La., where he has been detained because of the serious illness of this mother-in-law.

Dr. Anthony Leggio, the other major owner of BoldChapeau, the eighth-place finisher in the Kentucky Derby, and minority owner Tom Isbell are expected to be on hand for the Preakness. If Wyble can't make it, the colt will be saddled by Stephen A. Long.

Foolish Pleasure, scheduled to face six of the 14 opponents he whipped in the Derby on May 3, has been installed a 6-5 choice to makethe Preakness his 12th victory in 13 career starts.

A victory also would send him into the Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park of June 7 with a chance to become thoroughbred racing's 10th Triple Crown champion. A sweep of the West Coast; and Just The Time, the 1974 Belmont Futurity winner owner of 1974 Preakness winner Little Current.

Sydney, Australia, has one of the finest harbors in the world with 250 miles of shoreline.

55 mph retained

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Extension of the 55 mile-an-hour speed limit for more than two years has been tentatively approved by the Missouri House.

Approval of that measure, extending the expiration date of the lower speed limit from this Sept. 28 until Jan. 1, 1978, came Wednesday night as the House made the "federal compliance measure" a special order of business. Had that not occurred, the bill would not have been considered.

The proposal, which still faces final approval before going to the Senate, is necessary if the state does not wish to lose an estimated $125 million in federal highway funds. The lower limit went into effect March 4, 1974, under the threat that 10 per cent of the state's federal highway money would be withheld.

A second measure aimed at bringing state law into compliance with federal law under threat of the loss of about $7 million in federal funds was also tentatively approved. That bill would revise the state law on reporting incidents of child abuse.

Although passage of the speed limit bill was mandatory for the state to retain its federal highway funds, it was that fact that led some members to call for its defeat.

"It's time to stand up and say no more of this federal blackmail and this is the bill to do it on," said C. F. Cline, D-Sikeston. "The time has come to stop it. The time is now, tonight, to tell the Congress where they can go."

Cline, whose remarks were met with applause and cheers from the members on the floor, dared the Congress to try to withhold some of the state's federal highway funds.

Where do we get the news?

By FRANK WATSON

The other day somebody asked me what I do for a living. Modestly, I answered, "I work for The Daily Standard."

"Oh? You deliver papers?"

"No. I'm a reporter."

"Oh." She paused for a moment, looked thoughtful, then said, "Well, what do you do?"

It was a pretty girl who asked me the question that time, but I imagine she's just one of many who do not understand what a reporter does. When children tour The Daily Standard plant, one of the most asked questions is, "Where do you get the news?"

The only way to get news is to hustle. You have to meet people, talk to people and get to know them. You have to keep moving. You have to be on top of everything. You have to know what's happening before it happens, and when it happens you have to be there. You have to know who, what, when, where, why and how.

It means, at times, working fordays for only a minor story. Or it may mean two or three front page headlines in one day. But you have to keep hustling.

A person watching me, or any reporter work, might find it hard to believe we're hustling. Chances are they would catch me sitting, apparently doodling. But fromthe rough notes of the meeting, you will read in the next day's newspaper about yur taxes being raised or lowered, or about whether or not yourstreet will be paved.

If a person kept close watch, he might see me leaning back in a chair reading a newspaper or magazine: I have to know what my competition is doing to see if I've missed anything. In my reading I may get an idea for a story of my own. Or I will gain information I can use as background material for a later story.

A person watching me work might see me chatting with a dozen people a day. Enjoyable talk: shooting the breeze. But in the talk, a story may be uncovered. I have obtained several stories from informal, off-the-record talks over coffee or lunch.

When a reporter uncovers a story, he usually has to make several telephone calls to verify facts or get the correct spelling of names. Sometimesyou have to make a dozen calls for just a minor story, and even then you may not have all the facts.

All reporters are not good. I'm not as good as I should be. I'm still young and lack experience. Older journalists might laugh at some of my mistakes.

We have some good reporters on The Daily Standard staff, striving for accuracy, fairness and the complete story. Some of our reporters cover entire counties single-handedly; one is assigned to cover two counties. On some days so much is happening, there is no way one person can get it all, and not enough space in the news pages to use all we get.

Nevertheless, there are the daily phone calls to make, office holders to visit, meetings to attend ... always another story to write.

ALMOST ALONE

Once.....
Unknowingly, unwillingly,
I almost placed my hand
In Death's strong clasp.
I did not feel fear.
I was too stunned
At its reality, its proximity;
But I must say I hesitated.
I stood there, helplessly,
And almost alone

I escaped,
But not through cleverness
Or fine use of my brain-
It was not working well
Nor was it trained skills.
But through the struggles.
Perhaps subconsciously,
Perhaps miraculously,
Of a child still unborn.

Some may attempt
To explain it medically,
Others can spiritually
Many simply shrug
At coincidence.
Say what you will.
I only know I am still here.
Yet, this I do know:

When I gazed upwards.
Thankfully, as one will.
The sky was never bluer
There were no clouds-
As far as my eye shall ever see
When I dared drop my gaze.
So green was the grass I felt
Someone had tinted my whole world
Just for me, just for my homecoming.

How can one fail to be humble?
Or appreciate God's gifts
To the least of us?
Can one ever forget
That no one is really
Ever alone?
Can one not appreciate
The calm beauty
Of blue skies and green grass?

Will someone ever convince me
That I or that sweet child
Do not still yet have work to do?
But then--don't we all?
Isn't life itself
One long miracle?
Can we afford not
To be awed at our survival
And the beauty around us?

Dear Mr. Blanton:

My thanks go to you for your help in bringing the program and appeal of Scott, Mississippi, and New Madrid counties Skate-for-Cerebral Palsy to the attention of the people of this area.

The children, parents, volunteers, and staff of Scott, Mississippi, and New Madrid counties join me in this expression of appreciation.

I would also like to express my appreciation to Miss Jackie Schoeneman of the Standard staff for her interest and news article on the Children's Therapy Center.

Sincerely,
Thomas H. Richey, President

ALMOST ALONE

Once.....
Unknowingly, unwillingly,
I almost placed my hand
In Death's strong clasp.
I did not feel fear,
I was too stunned
At its reality, its proximity;
But I must say I hesitated.
I stood there, helplessly,
And almost alone.

I escaped,
But not through cleverness
Or fine use of my brain-
It was not working well
Nor was it trained skills.
But through the struggles.
Perhaps subconsciously,
Perhaps miraculously,
Of a child still unborn.

Some may attempt
To explain it medically,
Others can spiritually.
Many simply shrug
At coincidence.
Say what you will.
I only know I am still here.
Yet, this I do know:

When I gazed upwards,
Thankfully, as one will.
The sky was never bluer.
There were no clouds--
As far as my eye shall ever see
When I dared drop my gaze,
So green was the grass I felt
Someone had tinted my whole world
Just for me, just for my homecoming.

How can one fail to be humble?
Or appreciate God's gifts
To the least of us?
Can one ever forget
That no one is really
Ever alone?
Can one not appreciate
The calm beauty
Of blue skies and green grass?

Will someone ever convince me
That I or that sweet child
Do not still yet have work to do?
But then--don't we all?
Isn't life itself
One long miracle?
Can we afford not
To be awed at our survival
And the beauty around us?

Anyone who has sex once, just once, can get syphilis or gonorrhea.

VD is spreading through our neighborhoods. Hitting people you'd least expect to get it.

Pillars of society are falling at out-of-town conventions and bringing VD home to their wives. Finding that hard to believe is one of the reasons it's spreading so fast.

So don't think it's not your problem.

Antibiotics cure VD and prevent its spreading. So it's ironic there's so much VD around when it's so easy to prevent or cure.

If you're curious or confused, get information or a pamphlet at most pharmacies or a health clinic. If you need help, see a doctor.

V.D. isn't what "other people" get anymore.

Rally for teens to be held

A special Teen Challenge rally will be presented by Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center at 7:30 p.m. Friday at First Assembly of God Church, 306 S. Kingshighway.

The rally will feature the Rev. J. Elbert Calloway, pastor of Trinity Park Tabernacle in Granite City, Ill., Ill., and a noted convention speaker and youth counselor. Also featured will be singing by the New Creations choir from the Mid-America training center at Cape Girardeau, which is comprised of former drug abusers, alcoholics and delinquent youth.

Testimonies of how they have found a positive cure from drug addiction also will be shared by young men presently enrolled as students at Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center.

No admission fee will be charged for the rally, but donations will be received to help the training center raise funds to enlarge its staff to handle the growing enrollment. The enrollment has almost doubled from 31 to 56 students in the last four months, according to the Rev. Phil Breithaupt, area representative for the center.

Additional housing is also an urgent need since some of the students are now being housed off the campus due to the enrollment influx.

The Teen Challenge program was founded by and grew out of the ministry of the Rev. David Wilkerson, author of "The Cross and the Switchblade", a best-selling book and widely distributed motion picture.

LITTLE EYES UPON YOU DAD

There are little eyes upon you,
And they are watching night and day
There are little ears that quickly
Take in everything you say.

There are little hands all eager
To do everything you do
And a little boy who's dreaming
Of the day he will be like you.

You are the little fellows Idol,
You're the wisest of the wise:
In his little mind about you,
No suspicions ever rise:

He believes in you devoutly,
holds that all you say and do
He will say and do in your way
When he's grown up just like you.

There's a wide eyed little fellow
Who believes you're always right
And his ears are always open
And he watches day and night.

You are setting an example
Every day in all you do
For the little boy who's waiting to grow up to be like you.

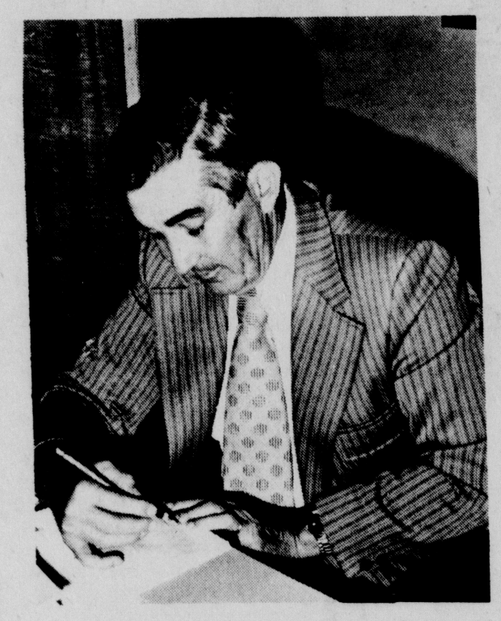
ASK L. T. McSPADDEN:

Why Do Rates Go Up?



L. T. McSPADDEN

L. T. McSpadden is vice president in charge of legal and personnel matters for Arkansas-Missouri Power Company and Associated Natural Gas Company. He was interviewed recently on how employee wages and benefit costs affect the company's cost of operations.

Q. What has happened to Ark-Mo and Associated's gross payroll in recent years?

A. Using 1969 as a base and relating the next five years, our total payroll increased by 49.3 percent. During that time, the number of employees did not increase, so the growth in payroll was due to an increase in wage rates. Gross payroll in 1969 was $3,930,000. In '74 it was $5,866,000. Our average employment in '74 was 534 persons.

Q. What about the cost of employee benefits?

A. Benefits, such as our retirement plan, life insurance, and accident and health plans are keyed to payroll so that they will follow, generally speaking, payroll increases so, as payroll increases, so will benefit costs. For example, during '74, in addition to payroll, the company paid $786,532.15 in pension costs, insurance premiums and other benefits. In addition, the company paid another $354,253.35 in taxes for employees, such as Social Security taxes and Federal and state unemployment compensation taxes. That's well over $1,000,000 of benefit costs that were in addition to our 1974 gross payroll of $5.8 million.

Q. How do those costs relate to your company's cost of operations?

A. During the five years that payroll increased some 49 percent, sales of electricity increased only 28 percent. Natural gas sales last year were less than 5 percent above the 1969 level, due primarily to the natural gas shortage. The net effect is that payroll costs are going up a lot faster than sales. In '69 the payroll cost per kilowatt-hour of electricity sold to a retail customer was 2.9 mills. Last year the cost was 3.3 mills. As for natural gas, the payroll cost per thousand cubic feet of gas in '69 was 12.06 cents. Last year the cost was 18.26 cents . . . an increase of 51.4 percent.

Q. Can't Ark-Mo and Associated control the amount spent on wages and benefits?

A. Only to a degree. Our employees must be able to earn a living wage. Inflation affects our employees the same as those of any other business. As the cost of living increases, so must wages.

And yet, we only have one source of revenues to cover increasing costs, and that is the sale of natural gas and electricity. But we have virtually no control over the quantity of these sales, especially as we face a natural gas shortage.

So, there comes a time when we have no alternative but to increase rates so as to have enough revenue to cover increasing costs and still make a modest profit.

Ark-Mo and Associated hope this interview with Mr. McSpadden has helped you understand why, at times, it becomes necessary for us to seek adjusted rates. The amount we spend on wages and employee benefits is just one of several factors with which we are contending in this period of double-digit inflation.

Rally for teens to be held

A special Teen Challenge rally will be presented by Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center at 7:30 p.m. Friday at First Assembly of God Church, 306 S. Kingshighway.

The rally will feature the Rev. J. Elbert Calloway, pastor of Trinity Park Tabernacle in Granite City, Ill., Ill., and a noted convention speaker and youth counselor. Also featured will be singing by the New Creations choir from the Mid-America training center at Cape Girardeau, which is comprised of former drug abusers, alcoholics and delinquent youth.

Testimonies of how they have found a positive cure from drug addiction also will be shared by young men presently enrolled as students at Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center.

No admission fee will be charged for the rally, but donations will be received to help the training center raise funds to enlarge its staff to handle the growing enrollment. The enrollment has almost doubled from 31 to 56 students in the last four months, according to the Rev. Phil Breithaupt, area representative for the center.

Additional housing is also an urgent need since some of the students are now being housed off the campus due to the enrollment influx.

The Teen Challenge program was founded by and grew out of the ministry of the Rev. David Wilkerson, author of "The Cross and the Switchblade", a best-selling book and widely distributed motion picture.

LITTLE EYES UPON YOU DAD

There are little eyes upon you,
And they are watching night and day
There are little ears that quickly
Take in everything you say.

There are little hands all eager
To do everything you do
And a little boy who's dreaming
Of the day he will be like you.

You are the little fellows Idol,
You're the wisest of the wise:
In his little mind about you,
No suspicions ever rise:

He believes in you devoutly,
holds that all you say and do
He will say and do in your way
When he's grown up just like you.

There's a wide eyed little fellow
Who believes you're always right
And his ears are always open
And he watches day and night.

You are setting an example
Every day in all you do
For the little boy who's waiting
to grow up to be like you.

THE RYATTS By Jack Elrod

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, May 15, the 135th day of 1975. There are 230 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, The Netherlands surrendered to Germany in World War II.

On this date —

In 1571, Moscow was burned by the Tartars.

In 1602, Cape Cod was discovered by the English navigator, Bartholomew Gosnold.

In 1767, Genoa sold the island of Corsica to France.

In 1862, the U.S. Department of Agriculture was established by Congress.

In 1918, the first regular air mail service began between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

In 1924, Congress passed a bill putting immigration into the United States on a quota basis.

Ten years ago: In the Dominican Republic, there was fighting in Santo Domingo between government and rebel forces despite negotiation efforts by the Organization of American States.

Five years ago: A predominantly Black school in Mississippi, Jackson State College, closed after two students were killed and nine wounded by police gunfire.

One year ago: Lt. Gen. Antonio de Spinola became president of Portugal and named a new left-leaning government.

Thought for today: It is absurd to divide people into good and bad. People are either charming or tedious — Oscar Wilde, Irish writer, 1854-1900.

Bicentennial footnote: It was 200 years ago today that the Continental Congress resolved to put 12 colonies in a state of defense after the first shots of the American Revolution. Georgia was not yet represented at the sessions in Philadelphia.

Today in U.S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, May 15, the 135th day of 1975. There are 230 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1940, The Netherlands surrendered to Germany in World War II.

On this date —

In 1571, Moscow was burned by the Tartars.

In 1602, Cape Cod was discovered by the English navigator, Bartholomew Gosnold.

In 1767, Genoa sold the island of Corsica to France.

In 1862, the U.S. Department of Agriculture was established by Congress.

In 1918, the first regular air mail service began between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

In 1924, Congress passed a bill putting immigration into the United States on a quota basis.

Ten years ago: In the Dominican Republic, there was fighting in Santo Domingo between government and rebel forces despite negotiation efforts by the Organization of American States.

Five years ago: A predominantly Black school in Mississippi, Jackson State College, closed after two students were killed and nine wounded by police gunfire.

One year ago: Lt. Gen. Antonio de Spinola became president of Portugal and named a new left-leaning government.

Thought for today: It is absurd to divide people into good and bad. People are either charming or tedious — Oscar Wilde, Irish writer, 1854-1900.

Bicentennial footnote: It was 200 years ago today that the Continental Congress resolved to put 12 colonies in a state of defense after the first shots of the American Revolution. Georgia was not yet represented at the sessions in Philadelphia.

Police said the Tucker car was northbound on Scott Street and the Boes car was eastbound on Center Street. According to the two women in the Boes car, the Tucker car failed to stop at the stop sign, while Mrs. Tucker said she stopped but didn't see the on coming car, police said. The Tucker car struck the Boes car which was making a left turn onto Scott Street.

Police said there were no arrests.

24 killed this year in area

POPLAR BLUFF — The traffic picture for the first four months of 1975 has not been a pleasant one for Southeast Missouri, in that 24 people were killed during that period, according to the highway patrol.

Of that total, 14 persons had not yet reached their 30th birthday. The patrol reported that 20 fatal accidents occurred in Troop E — 10 of which involved drinking. Fifteen of the accidents were one-car mishaps.

In noting that drinking and overconfidence tends to kill many and injure many others, the patrol reported that 408 people have been injured in 828 accidents in Southeast Missouri through April.

Although a driver may be very skillful, no amount of skill can keep a car on the road at excessive rates of speed, the patrol noted.

In the 13-county Troop E area, five persons were killed during April, including two deaths in Scott County and one each in New Madrid, Cape Girardeau and Bollinger counties.

In the area patrolled by Troop E, 92 persons were injured in traffic accidents during April, including five fatal accidents and 59 that involved injuries. The yearly total at the end of April was 20 fatal accidents and 223 with injuries.

In Mississippi, New Madrid, Scott, Stoddard, Pemiscot and Dunklin counties, statistics are as follows: Scott — 22 accidents, including one fatality and seven persons injured in April, and 76 accidents with three fatalities and 33 persons injured in the first four months.

Stoddard — 18 accidents with no fatalities and nine persons injured during April; and 70 accidents with one fatality and 37 injured for the year.

New Madrid — 22 accidents with one fatality and five persons injured in April; and 83 accidents with three fatalities and 30 injured persons for the year.

Mississippi County — 18 accidents, no fatalities and 14 persons injured in April, and 60 accidents with one fatality and 25 persons injured for the year.

Pemiscot County — 11 accidents, no fatalities and five persons injured in April; and 65 accidents, no fatalities and 30 persons injured in the first quarter of the year.

Dunklin County — 19 accidents, no fatalities and seven persons injured in April; and 82 accidents with one fatality and 32 persons injured for the year.

pioneers, faith in themselves, faith in their fellowmen, faith in their country and faith in God created the standard of life. Hearnes declared, then added, "If our nation should decline, it will begin its decline because of a loss of faith in God and in our form of government.

"We can survive the customary sources of friction which cause problems, including economical ups and downs and political struggles. We can work our way through hardships and differences of opinion, but we cannot survive a loss of faith", he said.

Bob Hedgepeth, immediate past president, gave a report of the 1974-75 activities, noting that during the past year the city has achieved three stars toward reaching the five-star goal in the Missouri Community Betterment Program. Stars that have been awarded were in the categories of community planning, education and utilities.

He said the chamber was grateful for the complete and whole-hearted cooperation that had been extended by the city officials in these efforts.

Hedgepeth said that since the Community Betterment Program was reactivated by the chamber two years ago, New Madrid has won awards both years in state competition as a result of community involvement and individual effort.

The most ambitious project by the chamber has been the renovation of a derelict building into a city museum and chamber office.

Other activities have included work by the industrial committee in continuing to pursue leads and contacts to induce prospective industry into the area and by the medical committee in providing office furnishings and medical equipment for Dr. T. Pattaropong.

Awards chairman Larry Rost cited the members of the building committee, who are in charge of the museum building project, for devoting their time and energy and for their faith in the project. Members are Vera Ashley, F. M. Baird, William Baird, George Bock, Kathleen Bock, Virginia Carlson, Ann Evans Copeland, Bill French, Dot Halstead and Jack Long.

Rost presented Hedgepeth a plaque in appreciation and recognition of his leadership and efforts as president during the past year and commended him for a job well done.

President Bill French, due to a case of laryngitis, called on vice president William Baird to present the program of work planned by the chamber for the next year.

Baird stated that action items adopted by the chamber include the annual citywide cleanup, fixup campaign; endorsement and participation in the city's park and recreational program; installation of permanent litter receptacles throughout the town; erection of welcome to New Madrid signs at entrances into the city; participation in the planned community Bicentennial activities; and help in establishing a minipark on the riverfront.

The chamber pledged its continued support for completion of the historical museum and will continue efforts in the community betterment five-star program.

Baird said the fourth star, in transportation, is expected to be awarded soon and that the fifth star, in community services, should be obtained by the end of summer.

The most important project for the chamber, Baird ssaid, was that of survival, adding that there are presently 84 members, including associate members.

"We need members who will become active and committed to the progress of New Madrid. To survive as an active and aggressive Chamber of Commerce, we must have progressive and active individual," he said.

The Rev. Claude Stayton, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, offered the invocation and benediction, and Bob Donze provided organ music.

An estimated 160 persons attended the banquet at the New Madrid County R-1 Vocational - Technical School.

24 killed this year in area

POPLAR BLUFF — The traffic picture for the first four months of 1975 has not been a pleasant one for Southeast Missouri, in that 24 people were killed during that period, according to the highway patrol.

Of that total, 14 persons had not yet reached their 30th birthday. The patrol reported that 20 fatal accidents occurred in Troop E — 10 of which involved drinking. Fifteen of the accidents were one-car mishaps.

In noting that drinking and overconfidence tends to kill many and injure many others, the patrol reported that 408 people have been injured in 828 accidents in Southeast Missouri through April.

Although a driver may be very skillful, no amount of skill can keep a car on the road at excessive rates of speed, the patrol noted.

In the 13-county Troop E area, five persons were killed during April, including two deaths in Scott County and one each in New Madrid, Cape Girardeau and Bollinger counties.

In the area patrolled by Troop E, 92 persons were injured in traffic accidents during April, including five fatal accidents and 59 that involved injuries. The yearly total at the end of April was 20 fatal accidents and 223 with injuries.

In Mississippi, New Madrid, Scott, Stoddard, Pemiscot and Dunklin counties, statistics are as follows: Scott — 22 accidents, including one fatality and seven persons injured in April, and 76 accidents with three fatalities and 33 persons injured in the first four months.

Stoddard — 18 accidents with no fatalities and nine persons injured during April; and 70 accidents with one fatality and 37 injured for the year.

New Madrid — 22 accidents with one fatality and five persons injured in April; and 83 accidents with three fatalities and 30 injured persons for the year.

Mississippi County — 18 accidents, no fatalities and 14 persons injured in April, and 60 accidents with one fatality and 25 persons injured for the year.

Pemiscot County — 11 accidents, no fatalities and five persons injured in April; and 65 accidents, no fatalities and 30 persons injured in the first quarter of the year.

Dunklin County — 19 accidents, no fatalities and seven persons injured in April; and 82 accidents with one fatality and 32 persons injured for the year.

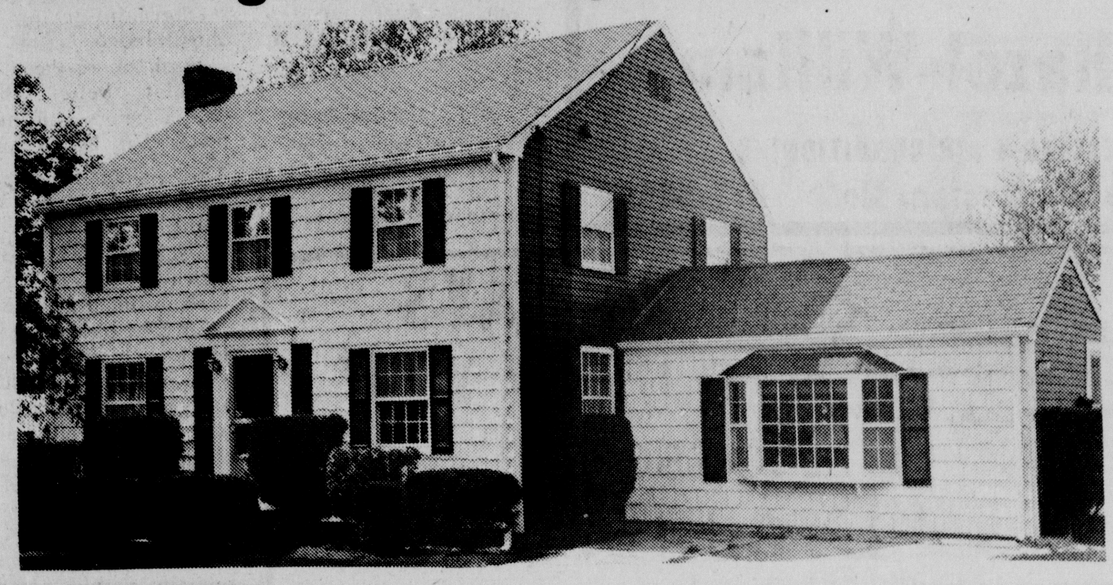
How to Make a Siding Remodeling Job a Design Project



You and your remodeling contractor can design a dramatic look for the exterior of your home that is both beautiful and functional. The remodeled home shown here is an example of what can happen when a siding job becomes a design project with an overall aesthetic look in mind. This rather ordinary two-story colonial was transformed into a striking, unique "new" home with a combination of United States Steel siding materials and accessories.

A number of good design concepts were employed in this remodeling job. The overall idea, of course, is an exterior that is both beautiful and as maintenance free as possible. All the United States Steel Building Products used here fulfill this idea. There is no need for constant painting or repairing—the new look lasts and lasts.

A combination of products was used with attention to color and texture to create a dramatic, different look for the home. Rustic-looking, white shake shingles crafted of fiberglass put the focus on the front of the home. The product here is low-maintenance United States Steel Super Rigid Shake™ which comes in interlocking panels for easy application. For contrast and color, United States Steel Smooth Cape Cod-5® Aluminum Siding in a deep, rich red called Winthrop Red is used on the rest of the home.

Function is as important as beauty. For added living space, the garage is converted to a family room with the addition of a bay window. White Super Rigid Shake Shingles tie it in with the rest of the home.

United States Steel Aluminum Rain-Carrying Systems in Brilliant White replaced old gutter and downspout. The new system is heavy gauge aluminum with baked-on enamel finish.

The finishing touch is United States Steel Polystyrene Shutters in Black. They add color and texture since they are grained to look and feel like wood. The shutters won't rot, dent or warp and are made to last with minimal maintenance.

The result is a home that is new-looking, aesthetically pleasing and practically maintenance-free—all without the expense and trouble of moving.

Look in your Yellow Pages for the name of the remodeling contractor nearest you who handles United States Steel Building Products.

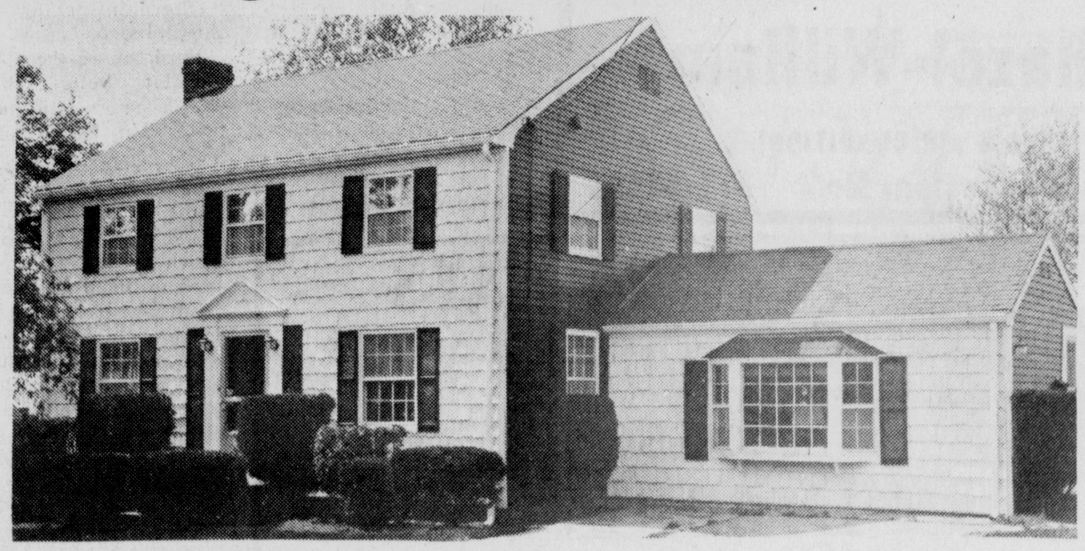
How to Make a Siding Remodeling Job a Design Project



You and your remodeling contractor can design a dramatic look for the exterior of your home that is both beautiful and functional. The remodeled home shown here is an example of what can happen when a siding job becomes a design project with an overall aesthetic look in mind. This rather ordinary two-story colonial was transformed into a striking, unique "new" home with a combination of United States Steel siding materials and accessories.

A number of good design concepts were employed in this remodeling job. The overall idea, of course, is an exterior that is both beautiful and as maintenance free as possible. All the United States Steel Building Products used here fulfill this idea. There is no need for constant painting or repairing—the new look lasts and lasts.

A combination of products was used with attention to color and texture to create a dramatic, different look for the home. Rustic-looking, white shake shingles crafted of fiberglass put the focus on the front of the home. The product here is low-maintenance United States Steel Super Rigid Shake™ which comes in interlocking panels for easy application. For contrast and color, United States Steel Smooth Cape Cod-5® Aluminum Siding in a deep, rich red called Winthrop Red is used on the rest of the home.

Function is as important as beauty. For added living space, the garage is converted to a family room with the addition of a bay window. White Super Rigid Shake Shingles tie it in with the rest of the home.

United States Steel Aluminum Rain-Carrying Systems in Brilliant White replaced old gutter and downspout. The new system is heavy gauge aluminum with baked-on enamel finish.

The finishing touch is United States Steel Polystyrene Shutters in Black. They add color and texture since they are grained to look and feel like wood. The shutters won't rot, dent or warp and are made to last with minimal maintenance.

The result is a home that is new-looking, aesthetically pleasing and practically maintenance-free—all without the expense and trouble of moving.

Look in your Yellow Pages for the name of the remodeling contractor nearest you who handles United States Steel Building Products.

NEW DESIGNS FOR LIVING — shown above are two new types of siding — "Shadow Grain," top, and "Vinyl-Tuf" — which are embossed for a deep, wood-grain effect. Shadow Grain employs a two-tone paint effect while Vinyl-Tuf utilizes layers of polyvinyl chloride to impart long-life and beauty. Shown below are load bearing aluminum columns that will last a "housetime."

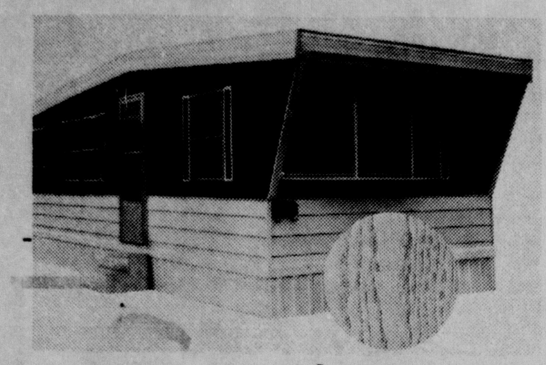
A Vinyl Skirting System For Mobile Homes

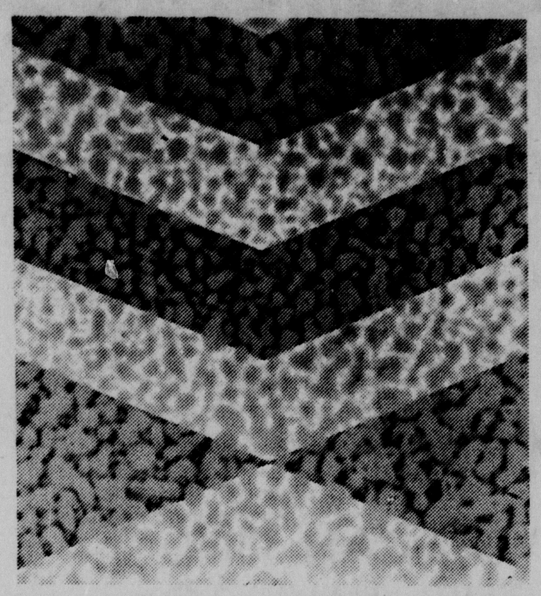


Certain-teed Products Corporation, which recently added a wood-grained, embossed finish to its vinyl skirting system for mobile homes, has just made a new color available as well... beige.

Available in white or the new beige tone, Certain-teed's skirting never needs paint. Dirt and grime are easily washed off. And because Certain-teed's vinyl colors are molded clear through the material, scratches never show.

Certain-teed's vinyl skirting system protects against blow-out (caused by inadequate ventilation) and ground-heave (alternate freezing and thawing of the ground, causing skirting to go up and down). It is easy to install, and even includes an access door for storage space. It will not attract lighting or conduct electricity.

Why You Should Paint With Quality Rollers and Brushes



This is a photograph of a typical application of paint on a standard hiding chart by a cheap, poor quality roller cover. Insufficient paint is being supplied by the roller, preventing immediate flow or leveling. Thus, paint builds up, instead of dispersing, and the white and black "valleys" of the background colors show through.

Paint can be one of the most inexpensive of all decorating products. Almost any room can take on a new magic color at a low, low cost. It isn't necessary to change the furniture, fabrics or floor coverings. And a meaningful decorating tour de force can be achieved with only a minimum of physical effort.

BUT....and this is a big but....even the highest quality paint will result in a disappointing application if cheap, poor quality rollers and brushes are used. Extreme "peaks and valleys" will be apparent, for example, after using poor quality roller covers. The peaks will have adequate film thickness to hide, but the valleys will be thin and allow any background color to show through.

Furthermore, there is a popular belief that darker colors will hide better than light colors. This is not necessarily true. The degree of hiding is due largely to the white hiding pigments which are in the bases used to tint deep colors. Deep color bases have far less white hiding pigment than pastel and medium tone bases. Also, colors which are bright and clean are often more transparent and hide less than the grayed or "muddy" colors.

There are a few important other steps recommended by Fuller-O'Brien dealers when adding a new color to an already existing underlying surface of color.

1. Measure the square feet covered per gallon. Refer to the recommended spreading rate listed on the label, making allowances if the type of surface is smooth or porous. There is always a tendency to use too little paint.

2. A radical color change may require a prime coat, tinted towards the finish color. A white or off white background may be more difficult to hide than a dark-colored surface.

3. If the underlying surface is too porous, the paint will penetrate, carrying the hiding power and color with it. Here again, priming may be necessary.

4. The applicator manufacturer's recommendation for roller type, nap size, etc. should be followed closely. Poor quality or wrong type will not provide a uniform and proper film thickness.

5. Be cautious with thinners. Excessive thinning will spread the paint over too much surface, thus reducing the hiding. Recommended thinning quantities are listed on labels.

6. Take time to mix the paint properly. Settled pigment on the bottom of the container is a loss to the potential hiding power. Shake or stir thoroughly before application.

7. Before repainting any surface, make sure that all cracks are carefully filled, then smoothed level with the surface. Small hairline cracks can be filled with spackling material. Large cracks often need to be filled with patching plaster. With every product, there is always an adequate set of directions. Follow them for satisfactory finished jobs.

One of the better sources in all 50 states for paint information and assistance are Fuller-OBrien dealers, designated by their company as "Paint Pro Shops," because of their experience and knowledgeability of products, applications, uses and techniques.

New Energy-Saving Central Air Conditioner

This new central air conditioning condensing unit is the most efficient offered by General Electric Executive Model TA930E with coil XA942A has a cooling capacity of 32,000-BTUH and an Energy Efficiency Rating of 10. That means it produces 10-BTUs of cooling for each watt of electricity it consumes.

In addition to its high efficiency, which will continue to pay dividends to the homeowner over the years if the cost of energy continues to rise, the new central air conditioner also is among the quietest GE systems on the market today. It features a two-speed automatic fan which loafs along on moderately warm days but shifts to "high" speed on scorchers, and GE's exclusive, performance proven Climatuff® compressor.

The new unit joins three other Executive series models in cooling capacities of 37,000-, 49,000- and 63,000-BTUH.

All are offered with GE's National Service Contract, available at the time of purchase or installation, which protects against possible budget up-setting service costs that might occur during the second through fifth year of ownership as a result of normal usage.

Booklet Offers Everything

Although by now most people know more than they probably ever wanted to know about sex, compliments of Dr. Ruben and others, a few know very much about the biggest investment in their lives — their homes. So, with today's inflation, and energy costs soaring, the experts at the Home Institute of Certain-teed Products Corporation felt it was high time for homeowners to get some straight facts on roofing, siding and insulation.

Everything You Ever Wanted To Know About Roofing, Siding and Residential Insulation is a 32-page, illustrated booklet, written by Mort Waters, editor of Family Handyman. It provides in-depth answers to homeowners questions on selecting, purchasing, installing, and maintaining roofing, siding and insulation.

Waters points out, for example, the fact that sun, not wind and rain, does the most damage to a roof. He notes that attic insulation projects can be completed by almost anyone without prior knowledge or experience.

Interested homeowners can obtain these improvement tips, maintenance suggestions and valuable product information, by sending 25¢ to the Home Institute, Certain-teed Products Corporation, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, Pa., 19482.

Tired Kitchen? Try This Remodeling Remedy

A trio of General Electric cooking appliances — deluxe self-cleaning built-in wall oven. Cleanline cooktop and night-light hood — provide the basics for remodeling a tired kitchen.

Have you finally decided that the kitchen of that new home of several years ago is now beginning to show its age to the point where even new curtains and fresh paint can no longer remedy its problems?

You are not alone.

Surveys indicate that in the average home, the kitchen is redone or remodeled in some fashion about every seven years.

More than likely the place you will want to start the renovation is with the most frequently used appliances ...the cooking equipment. Many homes built 10 to 15 years ago have electric wall ovens and countertop cooking units. Since that time these products have changed dramatically. Today the homemaker looking for replacements for these built-in appliances will find equipment with new features not available when their home was new.

For example, to replace your old wall oven you could select General Electric's Model JK16 deluxe built-in single single wall oven. This model offers automatic oven timing, an automatic meat thermometer, electric rotisserie, a convenient see-through oven window, plus a most important feature that wasn't available 10 to 15 years ago...a self-cleaning oven.

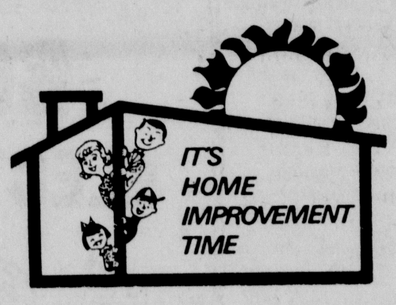
To compliment the oven and your new kitchen decor while replacing an out-dated surface cooking unit, today there is available General Electric's one piece Cleanline® glass-ceramic built-in cooktop Model JP90.

It adds usable conterspace to the kitchen, and spills and boilovers wipe up quickly and easily from the smooth surface. Infinite heat controls for each attractive Sunburst surface pattern, which turn yellow when in use, permit a full range of cooking temperatures.

To complete the remedy for old cooking equipment, General Electric now offers range hoods that not only handle cooking fumes, but provide a "night light" setting that reduces electrical power usage. The night light is also a convenient security light in the kitchen when you are not at home.

When you look to cure your kitchen's cooking appliance ills, new built-ins are a good prescription.

Handsome and handy, General Electric's new refrigerator-freezer offers through-the-door ice service (crushed ice or cubes) as well as 20.6-cubic feet of no-frost capacity, including a huge 6.82-cubic-foot freezer section.



New Designs For Living With Aluminum Siding

Aluminum-siding which looks like deep-grained wood and is highly resistant to weathering, will enhance the appearance of any home.

Known as "Vinyl-Tuf" and "Shadow Grain," the aluminum siding shrugs off temperature and environmental conditions because of the finishes employed. Both use an embossed face to help obtain the rough-hewn wood look.

Vinyl-Tuf utilizes an exclusive coating baked on the material before embossing, thus avoiding pin holes or thin spots in the material.

The finish provides excellent thermal, impact and corrosion resistance. It also resists scuffing, smearing and scratching. Performance tests indicate the Vinyl-Tuf finish provides outstanding resistance to erosion and chalking. The new siding carries a 30-year guarantee.

Shadow Grain aluminum siding employs an acrylic finish with a weathered wood appearance obtained by embossing, and accentuated by a two-tone painting process. The baked-on colors help prevent chipping, blistering, flaking or peeling.

BEFORE

Vinyl-Tuf and Shadow Grain are available in four colors in eight-inch and double-four styles. They join other designs of Reynolds Aluminum American Classic Siding, manufactured in 12 colors, in horizontal hollowback, insulated and double-four designs.

The classic look of supporting columns has been achieved in Reynolds new aluminum tapered columns. The load-bearing columns are offered in eight-inch diameter and eight-foot lengths and will withstand a load as much as 11,500 pounds each. Light weight and easily installed, the classic Colonial Columns are designed for indoor and outdoor applications in homes. The columns come complete with bases and caps.

Today the homemaker looking for replacements for these built-in appliances will find equipment with new features not available when their home was new.

For example, to replace your old wall oven you could select General Electric's Model JK16 deluxe built-in single single wall oven. This model offers automatic oven timing, an automatic meat thermometer, electric rotisserie, a convenient see-through oven window, plus a most important feature that wasn't available 10 to 15 years ago...a self-cleaning oven.

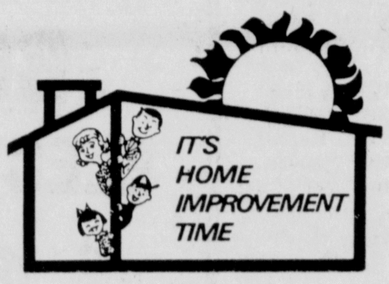
To compliment the oven and your new kitchen decor while replacing an out-dated surface cooking unit, today there is available General Electric's one piece Cleanline® glass-ceramic built-in cooktop Model JP90.

It adds usable conterspace to the kitchen, and spills and boilovers wipe up quickly and easily from the smooth surface. Infinite heat controls for each attractive Sunburst surface pattern, which turn yellow when in use, permit a full range of cooking temperatures.

To complete the remedy for old cooking equipment, General Electric now offers range hoods that not only handle cooking fumes, but provide a "night light" setting that reduces electrical power usage. The night light is also a convenient security light in the kitchen when you are not at home.

When you look to cure your kitchen's cooking appliance ills, new built-ins are a good prescription.

Handsome and handy, General Electric's new refrigerator-freezer offers through-the-door ice service (crushed ice or cubes) as well as 20.6-cubic feet of no-frost capacity, including a huge 6.82-cubic-foot freezer section.



New Designs For Living With Aluminum Siding

Aluminum-siding which looks like deep-grained wood and is highly resistant to weathering, will enhance the appearance of any home.

Known as "Vinyl-Tuf" and "Shadow Grain," the aluminum siding shrugs off temperature and environmental conditions because of the finishes employed. Both use an embossed face to help obtain the rough-hewn wood look.

Vinyl-Tuf utilizes an exclusive coating baked on the material before embossing, thus avoiding pin holes or thin spots in the material.

The finish provides excellent thermal, impact and corrosion resistance. It also resists scuffing, smearing and scratching. Performance tests indicate the Vinyl-Tuf finish provides outstanding resistance to erosion and chalking. The new siding carries a 30-year guarantee.

Shadow Grain aluminum siding employs an acrylic finish with a weathered wood appearance obtained by embossing, and accentuated by a two-tone painting process. The baked-on colors help prevent chipping, blistering, flaking or peeling.

BEFORE

Vinyl-Tuf and Shadow Grain are available in four colors in eight-inch and double-four styles. They join other designs of Reynolds Aluminum American Classic Siding, manufactured in 12 colors, in horizontal hollowback, insulated and double-four designs.

The classic look of supporting columns has been achieved in Reynolds new aluminum tapered columns. The load-bearing columns are offered in eight-inch diameter and eight-foot lengths and will withstand a load as much as 11,500 pounds each. Light weight and easily installed, the classic Colonial Columns are designed for indoor and outdoor applications in homes. The columns come complete with bases and caps.

Families Can Help Conserve U.S. Natural Resources

Energy to run a home costs more today than ever before.

Even more important is the fact that once abundant supplies have given way to shortages and a struggle to maintain and develop adequate fuel sources.

But the energy crisis of 1974 is not just a problem for industry and government to solve. It is a situation in which all Americans can help provide a solution.

The wise use and conservation of energy is an attainable and worthwhile goal for the family, as well as the corporation.

The most effective short term way to control rising costs and maintain adequate supply for residential users is to use energy in the most efficient manner.

According to the American Gas Association, the top energy savers in the home are: (1) 24-hour thermostat set back to 68 degrees F during the cold months (save up to 15% on your heating costs). (2) Adequate ceiling insulation (if you have no ceiling insulation and install 6 inches, you should save up to 17 percent of your heating and cooling costs and your pay back period due to fuel savings will average about 2 years). (3) Water heater set back to 120 degrees F or warm setting (save up to 15% of water heating costs). (4) Weather stripping or caulking. (5) Furnace and air conditioner tune-up — clean air filters frequently. (6) Storm doors and windows (save up to 20% of your heating and cooling costs. The pay back period is roughly 10 years for permanent units). (7) Air conditioning thermostat set no higher than 78 degrees F (save up to 15% of your cooling costs). (8) Eight hour thermostat set back at night (save up to 9% of your heating cost). (9) Reduction of bathing water consumption by one third. (Save up to 14% on your water heating cost). If all these things were done, a total potential savings of up to 40% could be achieved.

If an overall savings of 10% were achieved in home energy conservation, this would be more than enough energy required to supply 4 million new homes for a year.

Energy conservation in the home can make a measurable and significant contribution to solving the current and future energy supply situation, while new sources of energy are discovered and delivered to energy hungry America.

A Week End Do-It-Yourself Project Provides A Woodburning Fireplace

Step No. 1: "Let's put our fireplace here," the little lady says as she reads off the wall opening dimensions to her husband. He rules it off prior to cutting the wall.

Step No. 2: Wall studs are cut and removed to allow for placement of factory-built fireplace. Wallboard will be removed as next step.

Step No. 3: Fireplace base assembly is positioned so that it will be flush mounted with wall opening and at floor level with facing room.

Step No. 4: Chimney starter section is locked into place so that additional insulated chimney sections can extend through ceiling and roof.

Step No. 5: After opening is cut into ceiling and chimney section extended, firestop space plate is secured to ceiling.

Step No. 6: Chimney sections are added until they extend into metal housing panel assembly on roof and then a stainless steel slip section is installed.

Step No. 7: A variety of trim materials can be used to dress up the fireplace. This couple decided to use lightweight bricks for hearth extension.

Step No. 8: In this installation a rough sawn lumber mantel is attached to vertical facing panels. Fireplaces can be faced with marble, glass, brick, stone or similar materials.

Not too many years ago having a fireplace installed as a home improvement project was a major undertaking, both time- and money-wise. Forms had to be built, concrete mixed, poured and allowed to set. Then it was time for the brick masons to go to work.

Now, by contrast, the availability of factory-built fireplaces permits a home handyman of average ability to install a woodburning fireplace himself during a week end. Final facing treatment may require additional time. These units require no special support foundation or masonry work and they cost only about one-half as much as the conventional masonry fireplace.

According to Heatilator Fireplace, a division of Vega Industries, Inc., its line of factory-built fireplaces can be flush-mounted in a wall, placed against a wall, used as a room divider, placed in a corner or used as an island. This total flexibility of placement is possible because these fireplaces are designated "zero" clearance fireplaces" meaning that they can be safely installed butting against a combustible wall, partition or wood floor without the need of insulating materials. These Underwriters' Laboratories-listed fireplaces make use of air spaces and insulation installed around the firebox and throat to prevent excessive heat build up.

Factory-built fireplaces are available in several screened opening widths. So once you have decided upon fireplace size and room location, you are on your way to soon having an economical, pleasure-giving home improvement which will add to your home's value.

The Hassle-Free Way to Install

Complete, easy-to-follow instructions are provided for carrying out each installation step. The tools needed are found in most home tool boxes: folding or tape rule; carpenter's saw; keyhole saw; brace and bit; level and claw hammer.

Installation is relatively simple. For example, a flush-mounted built-in fireplace requires less than one dozen installation steps —

1) cut wall opening
2) position base assembly of fireplace
3) connect chimney starter sections
4) cut opening in ceiling
5) attach firestop spacer plate
6) cut opening in roof
7) apply roof flashing
8) apply chimney cap or termination
9) frame in around fireplace
10) close in with wall board or paneling
11) trim facing as desired

In addition to the materials supplied in the base fireplace assembly package, the only additional supplies needed will be 2 x 4 studs for framing in the fireplace metal chimney sections, and material for enclosing and trimming the built-in unit.

Heatilator® Chimney Sections Easy to Connect

You do not have to be a tinsmith or sheetmetal worker to assemble a Heatilator fireplace chimney. Chimney sections are available in either 2- or 3-foot sections. They consist of an outer metal shell, an inner layer of insulation, and a stainless stell inner liner — constructed into one easy-to-handle unit.

No chimney section construction or preassembly is necessary. Chimneys are installed simply by stacking one section upon another and giving it a twist. A locking ring device on the end of each section tightly joins sections together to provide a smoke-free joint.

This ease of chimney construction is made possible because each section of chimney is an integral unit with insulation factory sealed into the unit.

Final Appearance Depends Upon Imagination

Once the fireplace is installed, functionally-speaking, it is time to enclose the unit and decide what facing treatment is desired. Any finishing or decorative facing treatment can be used — wallboard, paneling, plaster, mirrors, stone, marble — depending upon the decor desired.

Some of the noncombustible simulated brick and stone facing materials are especially well adapted for factory-built fireplace installations. These materials are light and easy to install, either using nails or adhesives to secure them.

Mantels can be added if desired. These may be constructed of standard millwork materials used in facing, brought in from an old home that is being razed, or obtained from antique dealers.

Gas Stove Energy Tips

Did you know that the gas used by a range to cook three meals for a family of four costs about $.03 per day, based on a gas cost of 10 cents per therm? But even in the kitchen savings can be achieved. (1) A thermostatically controlled surface burner can save as much as 16% of energy used. Such devices use just the amount of energy needed to cook foods properly. (2) Bring water to a boil with a full flame, then reduce to simmer. Vigorous boiling wastes energy and does not cook food faster. Cover pans too. (3) Defrost foods before cooking. Use a pressure cooker when possible. (4) When using the oven, try to cook an entire meal at one time. Main dish, vegetables, bread and dessert. (5) Use a meat thermometer, don't preheat a gas broiler and don't leave oven door open while cooking.

Water Heater Energy Tips

If you have a gas water heater, you are already using an efficient energy appliance — using it effectively can save even more: (1) Lower water-termperature setting to 120 degrees F. (A savings to 10 to 20% of water heating costs can be achieved). (2) Repair dripping water faucets. (3) Wash full loads of clothes and dishes. (4) Use one third less hot water for bathing. (A savings of up to 14% of water heating costs can be achieved). (5) Insulate hot water pipes. (Clothes Dryer) (1) Dry full loads. (2) Clean lint filter after every load.

Fiber Glass Shingles Offer Good Looks and Long Life

Fiber glass is the "magic" ingredient in a new type of roofing shingle that offers unusually good looks and long life.

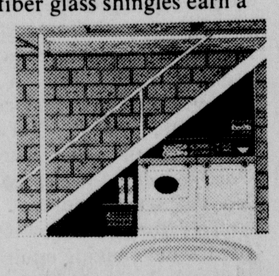
Johns-Manville, a leading manufacturer of roofing materials, pioneered the development of the fiber glass shingle, in which the organic felt base of the shingle is replaced by a tough fire-resistant mat of inorganic glass fiber. The fiber glass mat offers several important improvements.

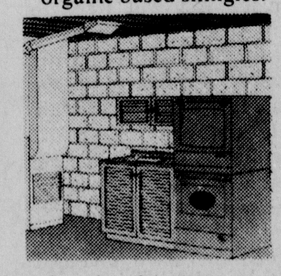
A fiber glass mat is stronger than organic felt for greater durability. Fiber glass shingles contain 55 percent more weather-proofing asphalt than conventional asphalt shingles.

Equally important, fiber glass shingles earn a Class A fire resistance rating from Underwriters Laboratories. This is the highest rating attainable, compared to a Class C for most organic shingles.

Also, fiber glass shingles offer better weather resistance than organic shingles. The inorganic mat base of fiber glass shingles cannot absorb moisture and thus do not swell and shrink as the humidity changes. These are conditions which can cause organic felt shingles to "move" on the roof and wear out prematurely.

Available in a wide range of attractive colors and an assortment of designs, fiber glass shingles are lighter in weight and easier to handle. They last longer yet cost little more than organic based shingles.





If the basement is the only place for a laundry center, consider an area that, in most cases, is unused — under the stairway. This Westinghouse washer and dryer uses only 54 inches. Shelving and cabinets can be easily added for laundry aids and storage space. Also in the basement, (right photo) the washer and dryer can be stacked in only 27 inches of space. The addition of a built-in sink and cabinets provides a complete laundry center in a minimum of space.

Vinyl Siding and New Roof Freshens Home Exteriors

Give the exterior of your home a whole new fresh look that will give you greater home comfort and protection, plus the full satisfaction of having one of the most attractive homes in your neighborhood.

Starting where it counts, on the exterior, you'll be protecting your valued inside walls and furnishings from unsightly damage, besides giving your exterior a new permanent clean look.

The exterior sidewall cover of your home has a number of purposes. It must first provide you the needed protection against the damaging effects of nature's elements. It should guard you against water entering your home either from wind-driven rains or from melting snow or ice, and prevent moisture seepage. It should also contain insulating properties to reduce the amount of heat entering your home during the summer, and keep the cold out in the winter. Similar properties for the purpose of reducing the outside noise level should also be inherent in the material.

Now, strong popularity is accorded this new exterior sidewall cover that can perform these tasks and more. Its solid vinyl clapboard and vertical styled sidings. For appearance, it creates handsome architectural effects especially when in use with other vinyl siding panels and with other natural siding materials, such as stone and brick.

Made of one of the toughest of all plastic compounds, solid vinyl siding is manufactured by Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole, Mass. It is a triumph of modern technology, emerging as one of the most beautiful, durable building materials ever discovered or invented. It took years of research and development to perfect.

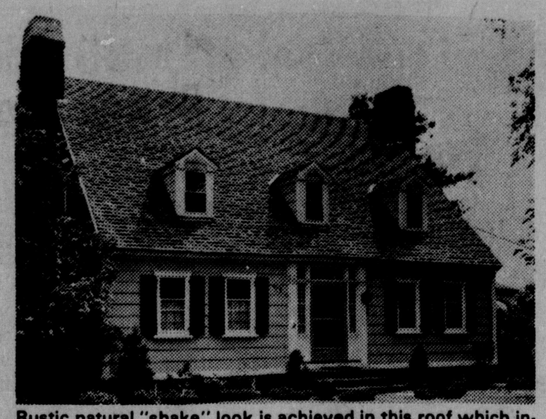
Solid vinyl is virtually indestructible and requires little or no maintenance. Dirt and grime may be removed with minimum of effort. It never needs paint or other surface coloring since the color of vinyl runs throughout the material. It is impervious to pollutants in the air, and is unaffected by fungi, termites or other vermin. It will not support fire nor will it conduct lightning or electricity.

Solid vinyl sidewall cover combines acoustical and thermal insulation properties with the aesthetic appeal of natural wood. It comes in colors proven to be most compatible to exterior designs; white and yellow.

A recent innovation in solid vinyl siding has been the development of BRANDED vinyl which accentuates handsome woodgrain textures, with vinyl-on-vinyl overtones.

The Bird & Son solid vinyl sidings and accessories have been approved for insured construction loans by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA), and conforms to the requirements of the Department of Commerce, National Bureau of Standards.

The firm also issues a siding warranty which covers defects of material and workmanship during manufacture.



Rustic natural "shake" look is achieved in this roof which includes wind and fire safety features that accompany the Class "C" classification granted by the testing firm of Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc. The construction and color variations of asphalt roofing shingles have become a dominant factor in the architectural styling in today's home. This newly designed heavy weight shingle presents a bold wood-textured appearance that lends charm and sophistication to all kinds of roof shapes.

Vinyl Siding and New Roof Freshens Home Exteriors

Give the exterior of your home a whole new fresh look that will give you greater home comfort and protection, plus the full satisfaction of having one of the most attractive homes in your neighborhood.

Starting where it counts, on the exterior, you'll be protecting your valued inside walls and furnishings from unsightly damage, besides giving your exterior a new permanent clean look.

The exterior sidewall cover of your home has a number of purposes. It must first provide you the needed protection against the damaging effects of nature's elements. It should guard you against water entering your home either from wind-driven rains or from melting snow or ice, and prevent moisture seepage. It should also contain insulating properties to reduce the amount of heat entering your home during the summer, and keep the cold out in the winter. Similar properties for the purpose of reducing the outside noise level should also be inherent in the material.

Now, strong popularity is accorded this new exterior sidewall cover that can perform these tasks and more. Its solid vinyl clapboard and vertical styled sidings. For appearance, it creates handsome architectural effects especially when in use with other vinyl siding panels and with other natural siding materials, such as stone and brick.

Made of one of the toughest of all plastic compounds, solid vinyl siding is manufactured by Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole, Mass. It is a triumph of modern technology, emerging as one of the most beautiful, durable building materials ever discovered or invented. It took years of research and development to perfect.

Solid vinyl is virtually indestructible and requires little or no maintenance. Dirt and grime may be removed with minimum of effort. It never needs paint or other surface coloring since the color of vinyl runs throughout the material. It is impervious to pollutants in the air, and is unaffected by fungi, termites or other vermin. It will not support fire nor will it conduct lightning or electricity.

Solid vinyl sidewall cover combines acoustical and thermal insulation properties with the aesthetic appeal of natural wood. It comes in colors proven to be most compatible to exterior designs; white and yellow.

A recent innovation in solid vinyl siding has been the development of BRANDED vinyl which accentuates handsome woodgrain textures, with vinyl-on-vinyl overtones.

The Bird & Son solid vinyl sidings and accessories have been approved for insured construction loans by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA), and conforms to the requirements of the Department of Commerce, National Bureau of Standards.

The firm also issues a siding warranty which covers defects of material and workmanship during manufacture.

Rustic natural "shake" look is achieved in this roof which includes wind and fire safety features that accompany the Class "C" classification granted by the testing firm of Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc. The construction and color variations of asphalt roofing shingles have become a dominant factor in the architectural styling in today's home. Remodeling Revives Older Home

Turning a "sow's ear" into a "silk purse" can be a source of enjoyment for anyone lucky enough to discover an old, but sturdy home in an established neighborhood.

The owner of what is now an impressive home on the New Jersey shore is a case in point. After 50 years, the house had begun to show its age. But, an extensive modernization project indoors and out transformed an ancient mariner" into a bright, handsome bayside home.

One of the major changes involved the replacement of a dull, nondescript utility area with a cheerful breakfast room, complete with a traditionally-styled angle bay window.

Two old windows and doors were removed. They were replaced by a double-hung window and an Andersen Perma-Shield Narroline angle bay unit, which provided the new breakfast room with plenty of natural light and offered a more expansive view of the outdoors.

The Andersen angle bay window, chosen for its low maintenance and weathertight properties, is the focal point of the remodeling. The window has a long-life vinyl-clad wood frame and sill, while the sash is protected by a four-step factory finish that won't chip, crack or peel or require painting for at least 10 years.

New cedar siding completed the remodeling project, giving the seaside home that had begun to display its age a fresh, bright appearance.

Tips For Tightening Your Home

One of the biggest and most costly wastes of energy in the home is the unnecessary loss of heat in the winter and increase of heat in the summer through walls, ceilings, floors, doors and windows.

Insulating your home properly is one of the key ways to stop it from being an energy-waster. In addition, these other tips, from the EEI will help you conserve energy:

1. Weatherstrip and caulk around all windows and doors. If they are leaking air, you may be increasing your heating bills.

2. Install storm windows or insulating glass. This will cut in half the amount of heat lost through the windows of your home.

3. By drawing shades or draperies on cold days when the sun isn't shining, you can also cut heat lost through windows.

Planning A New Bathroom?...

What is the most used room in the home—and often, the most neglected?

The bathroom.

No other room contributes so much per square foot to the quality of life for a family. More and more home-owners, becoming aware of this fact, are starting to remodel existing baths, and in many cases, adding second or third ones.

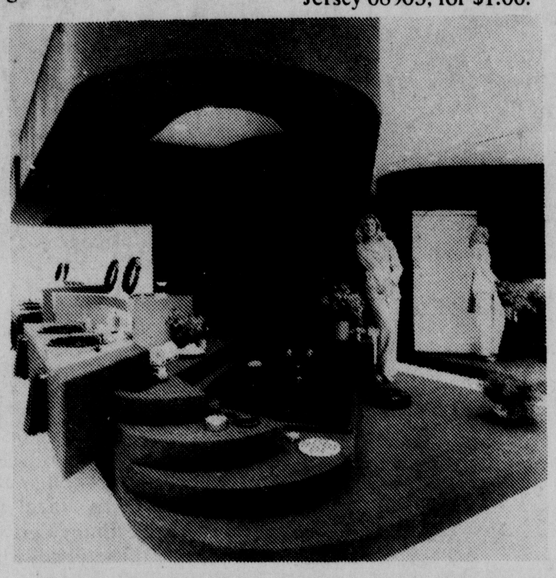
But where to start? Can old bathroom fixtures just be ripped out and replaced with new ones? In remodeling, is one limited to the plumbing that is already there? How do you stretch every penny and get the most for your money? How do you plan baths that grow with your family's needs? How can you find space for that needed powder room? And finally, what are the most contemporary ideas in modern plumbing—fixtures, materials, designs and colors?

These questions and many more are answered in a combined design kit and planning guide book from American-Standard.

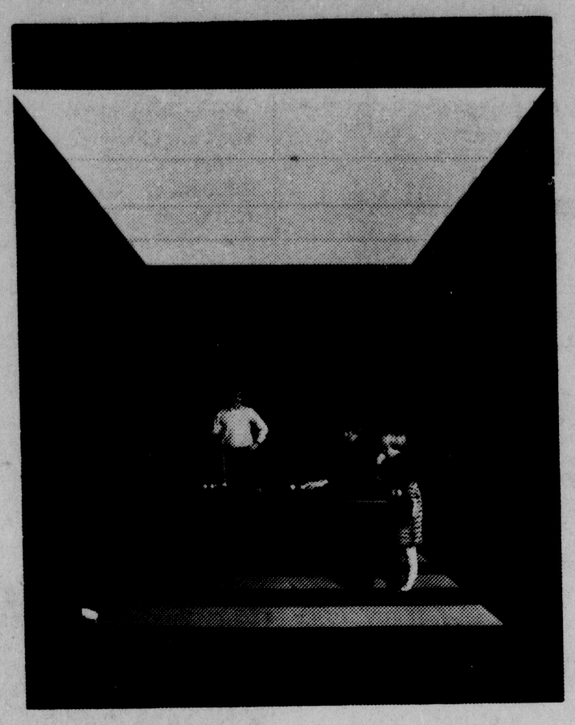
A feature of the kit is a 32-page brochure, "So you're Planning a Bathroom."...that colorfully illustrates many sample bathrooms and offers solutions to all the problems encountered in bathroom planning and remodeling.

The kit also contains scaled patterns of fixtures that the homeowner can position on charts showing new or remodeled bathroom dimensions, enabling him to visualize the proposed addition exactly as an architect might. Also included are a color selector, a product catalog and a planning manual.

The kit can be ordered from American-Standard, P.O. Box 2019, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903, for $1.00.



Fiber Glass Lay-In Ceiling Panels Do A Good Remodeling Job



A new suspended ceiling with J-M Whispertone fiber glass lay-in panels is often the best solution to lowering old fashioned high ceilings or hiding ugly pipes, duct, wiring or cracked plaster.

With a suspended ceiling you don't have to lose more than 3 inches of ceiling height, and access to the old ceiling is always easy.

Whispertone lay-in panels have a vinyl surface which is easily cleaned with soap and water. The lay-in panel absorbs up to 70% of the sound reaching its surface. It also serves as an insulator, as fiber glass resists the flow of heat to keep rooms warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Johns-Manville, a leading manufacturer of ceiling materials, says a Whispertone fiber glass lay-in panel ceiling is simple to install. According to J-M, there are only three basic parts to the ceiling's suspended network of channels which support the panels.

Johns-Manville offers a free 16-page booklet which shows how you can install a new ceiling quickly, easily and economically. It covers ceiling tiles and suspended ceilings. To obtain a copy, write to Johns-Manville at Greenwood Plaze, Denver, Colorado 80217, and ask for "How to Install J-M Ceilings," booklet IB-167A.

Increase Insulation Efficiency With Foil-back Sheetrock ® When You Add A Room

Beat the heat...and the cold as well, with Foil-Back SHEETROCK® Gypsum Panels. The aluminum surface reflects radiant heat rays, lowering a home's summertime indoor temperatures and reducing wintertime heat loss for significant fuel savings.

Foil-Back SHEETROCK also acts as a vapor barrier. Normal home activities—cooking, washing, breathing—produce moisture which in winter can penetrate the building shell and condense on the colder exterior walls, soaking sheathing and studs. The foil backing keeps moisture indoors, helping to keep humidity at a comfortable level while guarding against damage from vapor penetration. In summer, outside moisture is prevented from entering air-conditioned areas, reducing air-conditioning load while maintaining a low relative humidity.

These easy-to-handle panels are adaptable to virtually all exterior wall construction—wood frame, metal frame, furred masonry—any place where superior performance is desired. Application is standard and attachment is with nails, screws, or DURA-BOND® 200 Adhesive nail-on system.

For further information, write United States Gypsum Company, Dept. 160, 101 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Vinyl Siding In Gold

Homeowners, home remodelers, and home builders will now be able to choose from four handsome, architectural colors — Colonial White, Soft Yellow, Sage Green, and Harvest Gold.

Certain-teed's new gold color siding incorporates all the advantages of vinyl, including the deep shadowlines of clapboard which help enhance the appearance of any home design from traditional to contemporary.

The new siding is available in either 8-inch or double 4-inch horizontal widths with an attractive wood-grain surface. Vertical siding in an 8-inch width is also available.

Ideal for both re-siding and new construction, Certain-teed vinyl siding can easily be installed over any type of exterior and is backed with a 20-year warranty.

Because the color is molded clear through the material, vinyl siding also never needs paint and can't blister, peel or flake. Dirt and grime are easily removed with water while a detergent solution removes more stubborn stains.

If someone were putting together a list of the ten best-dressed roofs in America, one nominee would certainly have to be Franklin Square, a unique shopping center located in Franklin, Ohio.

The newly-opened center proves the point that in today's roofing fashions—just like today's clothing fashions—colors and combinations of colors are 'in.'

The center was originally speced in basic black shingles, but today, in just 1600 squares of roofing, you'll find no less than 12 different colors and six different styles of Certain-teed asphalt shingles, all applied on at least six different types of roof geometries.

Not only that, but at the center you'll find olive Hallmark shingles butting right up against red Sealdon shingles. Or, cedar Independence shingles right next to bronze Glassguard shingles. Anything goes in regard to roofing colors and textures at Franklin Square, and the result is one of the most decorative ideas using asphalt shingles to come along in quite a while.

Franklin Square itself is a somewhat different concept in shopping center planning for it was designed and built with authentic colonial details patterned after Williamsburg, Va.

Other influences for the center were the International Bazaar in the Bahamas and shops in the downtown area of Madrid, Spain.

Redwood Good Neigbor Fences

Ever think of a share-the-cost project with a neighbor? It often works when the neighbor is getting exactly the same advantages that accrue to the next door property. A good neighbor fence mignt be just the right proposition to your neighbor, especially if a fence is what both homes need for privacy.

A good neighbor fence looks the same on both sides. There are a variety of designs from which to select a fence that works for both houses. Only one stipulation need be made when cost and beauty are factors: the fence must be redwood since it meets the criteria of natural beauty, durability and versatility.

Most standard fence construction involves 4x4 posts, 2x4 stringers, and 1" or 5 8" boards in 6", 8" or 10" widths. Construction heart redwood is recommended for fences since it can be left to weather to a soft drift-twood grey, or can be painted or stained, since redwood holds a finish better and longer than any other wood. Maintenance is reduced when redwood is specified. The cinnamon-colored heartwood is so durable it can be used in the ground without treatment. It should be used for posts and rails exposed to standing water or in contact with the ground and vulnerable to decay and insect attack since redwood is resistant to these elements.

Garden fencing may enclose the perimenters of the property, or act as a wall at the end of a deck or patio. Simpson Timber Company redwood dealers have designs ideas for good neighbor fences, specifications for materials, and construction tips on how to get the posts into the ground and fence off the ground.

Everything You Wanted To Know About A Heat Pump

In these days we need to do everything possible to conserve the amount of energy we use, yet still live comfortably, such as having adequate heating and cooling in the home. There is one device — the heat pump — that accomplishes both these requirements, — providing maximum heating comfort in the winter and cooling in the summer and at the same time saving energy, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

When heating a home the heat pump takes the heat from the outside air and pumps it into the house. For cooling the unit does just the reverse — it removes the heat from the inside air and pumps it outside, just like any air conditioner.

At the same time it filters the air of impurities, thereby reducing your cleaning chores. During the summer, mugginess, even on the most humid days, is eliminated, and since windows can be kept closed, summer dirt, dust and noise are greatly reduced.

Because windows and doors can be kept closed, pollen is kept out of the house — welcome news for allergy sufferers.

The same compressor, fans and refrigerant coils that provide cooling also provide heating. This means lower installed cost for you compared to using two separate systems — one for heating and one for cooling.

The air, whether warmed or cooled, is distributed by a central system and circulated through ductwork into every room.

Electric duct heaters are usually added to provide supplemental heat in very cold weather and are automatically controlled.

A separately mounted, low-voltage heating-cooling thermostat controls the operation of the heat pump. This thermostat senses the need for heating or cooling and switches back and forth automatically, according to the temperature inside your house.

When it comes to saving energy this comfort-conditioning system uses energy so efficiently that on the heating cycle it supplies 1½ to 2 times as much heat as ordinary electric heaters. That is, the unit produces more units of heat for each unit of electricity needed to operate it, thus saving both money and energy.

What you buy, and pay for, are kilowatthours of electricity. So the more heat you get for each kilowatthour the less it costs you to warm your home.

And because it delivers more units of heat for each unit of electricity the heat pump helps to conserve critical fuels.

An electric heat pump saves space too. Some units are completely self-contained. Others, which are called split-systems, have part of the equipment indoors and part outdoors. The part of the system inside the house includes a cabinet, coil and blower and can be located about anywhere — in a basement, attic, or closet, or even hung in a crawl space. The outdoor unit, including a compressor and a coil, is located next to the house and can blend inconspicuously with your landscaping.

Planning A New Bathroom?...

What is the most used room in the home—and often, the most neglected?

The bathroom.

No other room contributes so much per square foot to the quality of life for a family. More and more home-owners, becoming aware of this fact, are starting to remodel existing baths, and in many cases, adding second or third ones.

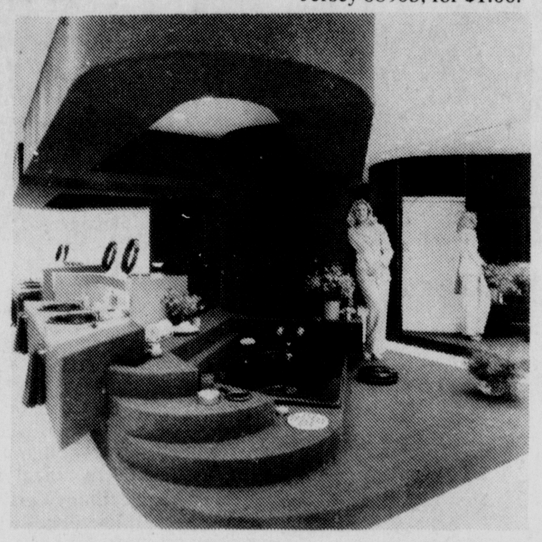
But where to start? Can old bathroom fixtures just be ripped out and replaced with new ones? In remodeling, is one limited to the plumbing that is already there? How do you stretch every penny and get the most for your money? How do you plan baths that grow with your family's needs? How can you find space for that needed powder room? And finally, what are the most contemporary ideas in modern plumbing—fixtures, materials, designs and colors?

These questions and many more are answered in a combined design kit and planning guide book from American-Standard.

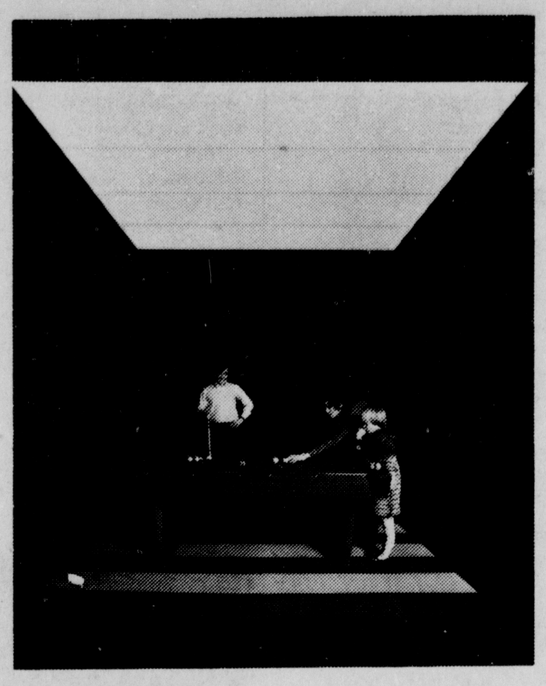
A feature of the kit is a 32-page brochure, "So you're Planning a Bathroom."...that colorfully illustrates many sample bathrooms and offers solutions to all the problems encountered in bathroom planning and remodeling.

The kit also contains scaled patterns of fixtures that the homeowner can position on charts showing new or remodeled bathroom dimensions, enabling him to visualize the proposed addition exactly as an architect might. Also included are a color selector, a product catalog and a planning manual.

The kit can be ordered from American-Standard, P.O. Box 2019, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903, for $1.00.



Fiber Glass Lay-In Ceiling Panels Do A Good Remodeling Job



A new suspended ceiling with J-M Whispertone fiber glass lay-in panels is often the best solution to lowering old fashioned high ceilings or hiding ugly pipes, duct, wiring or cracked plaster.

With a suspended ceiling you don't have to lose more than 3 inches of ceiling height, and access to the old ceiling is always easy.

Whispertone lay-in panels have a vinyl surface which is easily cleaned with soap and water. The lay-in panel absorbs up to 70% of the sound reaching its surface. It also serves as an insulator, as fiber glass resists the flow of heat to keep rooms warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Johns-Manville, a leading manufacturer of ceiling materials, says a Whispertone fiber glass lay-in panel ceiling is simple to install. According to J-M, there are only three basic parts to the ceiling's suspended network of channels which support the panels.

Johns-Manville offers a free 16-page booklet which shows how you can install a new ceiling quickly, easily and economically. It covers ceiling tiles and suspended ceilings. To obtain a copy, write to Johns-Manville at Greenwood Plaze, Denver, Colorado 80217, and ask for "How to Install J-M Ceilings," booklet IB-167A.

Increase Insulation Efficiency With Foil-back Sheetrock ® When You Add A Room

Beat the heat...and the cold as well, with Foil-Back SHEETROCK® Gypsum Panels. The aluminum surface reflects radiant heat rays, lowering a home's summertime indoor temperatures and reducing wintertime heat loss for significant fuel savings.

Foil-Back SHEETROCK also acts as a vapor barrier. Normal home activities—cooking, washing, breathing—produce moisture which in winter can penetrate the building shell and condense on the colder exterior walls, soaking sheathing and studs. The foil backing keeps moisture indoors, helping to keep humidity at a comfortable level while guarding against damage from vapor penetration. In summer, outside moisture is prevented from entering air-conditioned areas, reducing air-conditioning load while maintaining a low relative humidity.

These easy-to-handle panels are adaptable to virtually all exterior wall construction—wood frame, metal frame, furred masonry—any place where superior performance is desired. Application is standard and attachment is with nails, screws, or DURA-BOND® 200 Adhesive nail-on system.

For further information, write United States Gypsum Company, Dept. 160, 101 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Vinyl Siding In Gold

Homeowners, home remodelers, and home builders will now be able to choose from four handsome, architectural colors — Colonial White, Soft Yellow, Sage Green, and Harvest Gold.

Certain-teed's new gold color siding incorporates all the advantages of vinyl, including the deep shadowlines of clapboard which help enhance the appearance of any home design from traditional to contemporary.

The new siding is available in either 8-inch or double 4-inch horizontal widths with an attractive wood-grain surface. Vertical siding in an 8-inch width is also available.

Ideal for both re-siding and new construction, Certain-teed vinyl siding can easily be installed over any type of exterior and is backed with a 20-year warranty.

Because the color is molded clear through the material, vinyl siding also never needs paint and can't blister, peel or flake. Dirt and grime are easily removed with water while a detergent solution removes more stubborn stains.

For the homewoner planning to replace an out-of-date or leaking built-in dishwasher, saving the cost of installation could be the difference between buying a deluxe model and an unfeatured one.

Self-installation by the home handyman, therefore, could be the way to keep a homemaker happy while staying within a budget.

To help the handyman replace most old build-in dishwashers on their last legs with a new built-in model, developed a do-it-yourself General Electric dishwasher replacement kit.

The kit contains all the parts, such as rubber drain hose and clamps, copper water line, brass elbows and unions and electrical connectors, needed for a typical installation that includes removal of the old appliance, alteration of the existing plumbing and electric supply, and wiring and installation of the new General Electric built-in dishwasher. An electrical test light is also provided in the kit. The only installation tools normally needed are a screwdriver, wire cutter, tube cutter, and a crescent wrench; no soldering is required.

Detailed instructions, diagrams and illustrations on the backside of the kit take the do-it-yourselfer through the 17 steps of removal and replacement, with particular attention to safety and proper installation.

Remodeling Revives Older Home

Turning a "sow's ear" into a "silk purse" can be a source of enjoyment for anyone lucky enough to discover an old, but sturdy home in an established neighborhood.

The owner of what is now an impressive home on the New Jersey shore is a case in point. After 50 years, the house had begun to show its age. But, an extensive moddernization project indoors and out transformed an ancient mariner" into a bright, handsome bayside home.

One of the major changes involved the replacement of a dull, nondescript utility area with a cheerful breakfast room, complete with a traditionally-styled angle bay window.

Two old windows and doors were removed. They were replaced by a double-hung window and an Andersen Perma-Shield Narroline angle bay unit, which provided the new breakfast room with plenty of natural light and offered a more expansive view of the outdoors.

The Andersen angle bay window, chosen for its low maintenance and weathertight properties, is the focal point of the remodeling. The window has a long-life vinyl-clad wood frame and sill, while the sash is protected by a four-step factory finish that won't chip, crack or peel or require painting for at least 10 years.

New cedar siding completed the remodeling project, giving the seaside home that had begun to display its age a fresh, bright appearance.

Tips For Tightening Your Home

One of the biggest and most costly wastes of energy in the home is the unnecessary loss of heat in the winter and increase of heat in the summer through walls, ceilings, floors, doors and windows.

Insulating your home properly is one of the key ways to stop it from being an energy-waster. In addition, these other tips, from the EEI will help you conserve energy:

1. Weatherstrip and caulk around all windows and doors. If they are leaking air, you may be increasing your heating bills.

2. Install storm windows or insulating glass. This will cut in half the amount of heat lost through the windows of your home.

3. By drawing shades or draperies on cold days when the sun isn't shining, you can also cut heat lost through windows.

Nearly childproof. Entirely beautiful.

Planning A New Bathroom?...

What is the most used room in the home—and often, the most neglected?

The bathroom.

No other room contributes so much per square foot to the quality of life for a family. More and more home-owners, becoming aware of this fact, are starting to remodel existing baths, and in many cases, adding second or third ones.

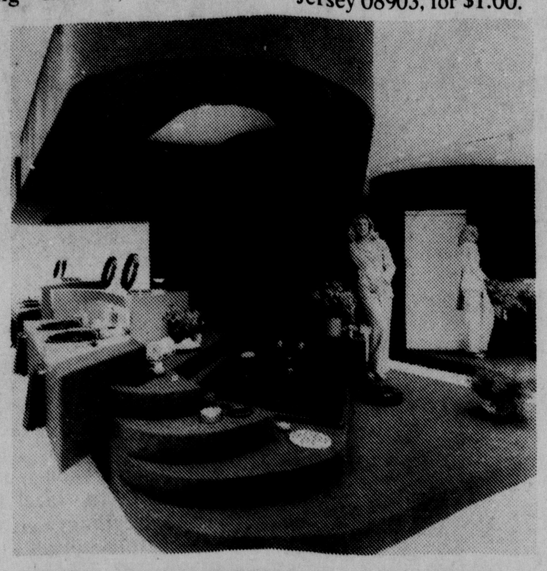
But where to start? Can old bathroom fixtures just be ripped out and replaced with new ones? In remodeling, is one limited to the plumbing that is already there? How do you stretch every penny and get the most for your money? How do you plan baths that grow with your family's needs? How can you find space for that needed powder room? And finally, what are the most contemporary ideas in modern plumbing—fixtures, materials, designs and colors?

These questions and many more are answered in a combined design kit and planning guide book from American-Standard.

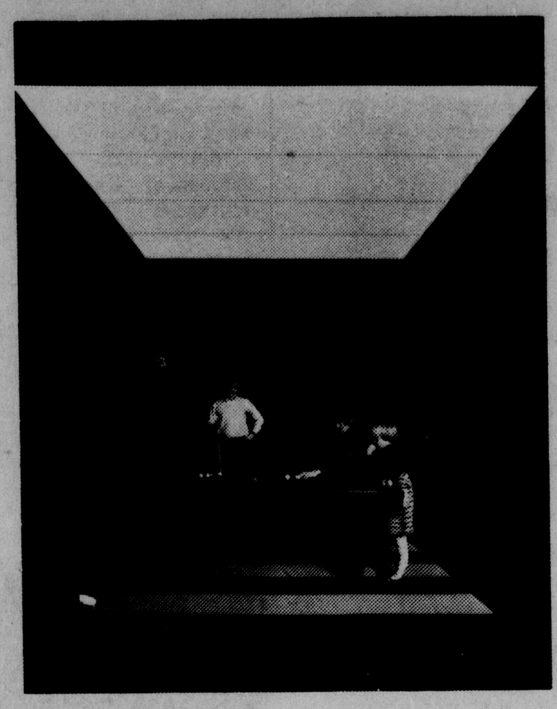
A feature of the kit is a 32-page brochure, "So you're Planning a Bathroom."...that colorfully illustrates many sample bathrooms and offers solutions to all the problems encountered in bathroom planning and remodeling.

The kit also contains scaled patterns of fixtures that the homeowner can position on charts showing new or remodeled bathroom dimensions, enabling him to visualize the proposed addition exactly as an architect might. Also included are a color selector, a product catalog and a planning manual.

The kit can be ordered from American-Standard, P.O. Box 2019, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903, for $1.00.



Fiber Glass Lay-In Ceiling Panels Do A Good Remodeling Job



A new suspended ceiling with J-M Whispertone fiber glass lay-in panels is often the best solution to lowering old fashioned high ceilings or hiding ugly pipes, duct, wiring or cracked plaster.

With a suspended ceiling you don't have to lose more than 3 inches of ceiling height, and access to the old ceiling is always easy.

Whispertone lay-in panels have a vinyl surface which is easily cleaned with soap and water. The lay-in panel absorbs up to 70% of the sound reaching its surface. It also serves as an insulator, as fiber glass resists the flow of heat to keep rooms warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Johns-Manville, a leading manufacturer of ceiling materials, says a Whispertone fiber glass lay-in panel ceiling is simple to install. According to J-M, there are only three basic parts to the ceiling's suspended network of channels which support the panels.

Johns-Manville offers a free 16-page booklet which shows how you can install a new ceiling quickly, easily and economically. It covers ceiling tiles and suspended ceilings. To obtain a copy, write to Johns-Manville at Greenwood Plaze, Denver, Colorado 80217, and ask for "How to Install J-M Ceilings," booklet IB-167A.

Increase Insulation Efficiency With Foil-back Sheetrock ® When You Add A Room

Beat the heat...and the cold as well, with Foil-Back SHEETROCK® Gypsum Panels. The aluminum surface reflects radiant heat rays, lowering a home's summertime indoor temperatures and reducing wintertime heat loss for significant fuel savings.

Foil-Back SHEETROCK also acts as a vapor barrier. Normal home activities—cooking, washing, breathing—produce moisture which in winter can penetrate the building shell and condense on the colder exterior walls, soaking sheathing and studs. The foil backing keeps moisture indoors, helping to keep humidity at a comfortable level while guarding against damage from vapor penetration. In summer, outside moisture is prevented from entering air-conditioned areas, reducing air-conditioning load while maintaining a low relative humidity.

These easy-to-handle panels are adaptable to virtually all exterior wall construction—wood frame, metal frame, furred masonry—any place where superior performance is desired. Application is standard and attachment is with nails, screws, or DURA-BOND® 200 Adhesive nail-on system.

For further information, write United States Gypsum Company, Dept. 160, 101 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Vinyl Siding In Gold

Homeowners, home remodelers, and home builders will now be able to choose from four handsome, architectural colors — Colonial White, Soft Yellow, Sage Green, and Harvest Gold.

Certain-teed's new gold color siding incorporates all the advantages of vinyl, including the deep shadowlines of clapboard which help enhance the appearance of any home design from traditional to contemporary.

The new siding is available in either 8-inch or double 4-inch horizontal widths with an attractive wood-grain surface. Vertical siding in an 8-inch width is also available.

Ideal for both re-siding and new construction, Certain-teed vinyl siding can easily be installed over any type of exterior and is backed with a 20-year warranty.

Because the color is molded clear through the material, vinyl siding also never needs paint and can't blister, peel or flake. Dirt and grime are easily removed with water while a detergent solution removes more stubborn stains.

If someone were putting together a list of the ten best-dressed roofs in America, one nominee would certainly have to be Franklin Square, a unique shopping center located in Franklin, Ohio.

The newly-opened center proves the point that in today's roofing fashions—just like today's clothing fashions—colors and combinations of colors are 'in.'

The center was originally speced in basic black shingles, but today, in just 1600 squares of roofing, you'll find no less than 12 different colors and six different styles of Certain-teed asphalt shingles, all applied on at least six different types of roof geometries.

Not only that, but at the center you'll find olive Hallmark shingles butting right up against red Sealdon shingles. Or, cedar Independence shingles right next to bronze Glassguard shingles. Anything goes in regard to roofing colors and textures at Franklin Square, and the result is one of the most decorative ideas using asphalt shingles to come along in quite a while.

Franklin Square itself is a somewhat different concept in shopping center planning for it was designed and built with authentic colonial details patterned after Williamsburg, Va.

Other influences for the center were the International Bazaar in the Bahamas and shops in the downtown area of Madrid, Spain.

Redwood Good Neigbor Fences

Ever think of a share-the-cost project with a neighbor? It often works when the neighbor is getting exactly the same advantages that accrue to the next door property. A good neighbor fence mignt be just the right proposition to your neighbor, especially if a fence is what both homes need for privacy.

A good neighbor fence looks the same on both sides. There are a variety of designs from which to select a fence that works for both houses. Only one stipulation need be made when cost and beauty are factors: the fence must be redwood since it meets the criteria of natural beauty, durability and versatility.

Most standard fence construction involves 4x4 posts, 2x4 stringers, and 1" or 5 8" boards in 6", 8" or 10" widths. Construction heart redwood is recommended for fences since it can be left to weather to a soft driftwood grey, or can be painted or stained, since redwood holds a finish better and longer than any other wood. Maintenance is reduced when redwood is specified. The cinnamon-colored heartwood is so durable it can be used in the ground without treatment. It should be used for posts and rails exposed to standing water or in contact with the ground and vulnerable to decay and insect attack since redwood is resistant to these elements.

Garden fencing may enclose the perimenters of the property, or act as a wall at the end of a deck or patio. Simpson Timber Company redwood dealers have designs ideas for good neighbor fences, specifications for materials, and construction tips on how to get the posts into the ground and fence off the ground.

IT'S HOME IMPROVEMENT TIME

Everything You Wanted To Know About A Heat Pump

In these days we need to do everything possible to conserve the amount of energy we use, yet still live comfortably, such as having adequate heating and cooling in the home. There is one device — the heat pump — that accomplishes both these requirements, — providing maximum heating comfort in the winter and cooling in the summer and at the same time saving energy, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

When heating a home the heat pump takes the heat from the outside air and pumps it into the house. For cooling the unit does just the reverse — it removes the heat from the inside air and pumps it outside, just like any air conditioner.

At the same time it filters the air of impurities, thereby reducing your cleaning chores. During the summer, mugginess, even on the most humid days, is eliminated, and since windows can be kept closed, summer dirt, dust and noise are greatly reduced.

Because windows and doors can be kept closed, pollen is kept out of the house — welcome news for allergy sufferers.

The same compressor, fans and refrigerant coils that provide cooling also provide heating. This means lower installed cost for you compared to using two separate systems — one for heating and one for cooling.

The air, whether warmed or cooled, is distributed by a central system and circulated through ductwork into every room.

Electric duct heaters are usually added to provide supplemental heat in very cold weather and are automatically controlled.

A separately mounted, low-voltage heating-cooling thermostat controls the operation of the heat pump. This thermostat senses the need for heating or cooling and switches back and forth automatically, according to the temperature inside your house.

When it comes to saving energy this comfort-conditioning system uses energy so efficiently that on the heating cycle it supplies 1½ to 2 times as much heat as ordinary electric heaters. That is, the unit produces more units of heat for each unit of electricity needed to operate it, thus saving both money and energy.

What you buy, and pay for, are kilowatthours of electricity. So the more heat you get for each kilowatthour the less it costs you to warm your home.

And because it delivers more units of heat for each unit of electricity the heat pump helps to conserve critical fuels.

An electric heat pump saves space too. Some units are completely self-contained. Others, which are called split-systems, have part of the equipment indoors and part outdoors. The part of the system inside the house includes a cabinet, coil and blower and can be located about anywhere — in a basement, attic, or closet, or even hung in a crawl space. The outdoor unit, including a compressor and a coil, is located next to the house and can blend inconspicuously with your landscaping.

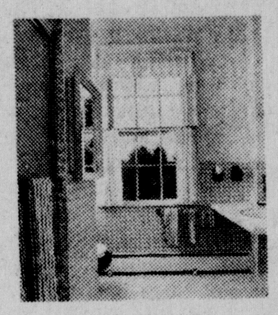
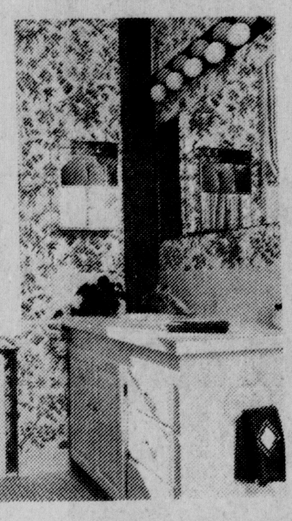
Remodeling the Run-Down Bath

Change is the spice of life. Renewing a bath can be a revitalizing experience. And that feeling isn't limited just to updating an antique or malfuctioning bath. We can gain the same reaction from revising a worn 1950 bath. Here on this page is a study of many facets of bath remodeling: lighting, adding a bidet, ceramic tile news, good design and the best of new bath products.





A fresh green-and-white theme, coordinated throughout the bath space, replaced the weary look inherited by the present owners of the 1799 house. Also added: new fixtures, better storage and lighting, more efficient heating.

If it hadn't been for a leaking pipe and a water-stained living room ceiling, this handsome changeover might have been postponed another 12 months.

"We wanted to redo the baths when we moved in three years ago," explains the owner, "but with the expenses of moving and the new mortgage, we told ourselves we'd make do 'for a while'. I couldn't be more pleased that the broken pipe precipitated our bath remodeling."

Built in 1799, the Connecticut house had probably been through several bath remodelings before the current owners bought it. "We were so sick of the maroon tub and toilet installed by the last owner. I can't imagine that that color was ever 'in'. And our tile design: pink hearts on a white background—it was unbelieveable!

"The children's bath was worse. The shower was an old-fashioned metal stall and at the sink there were two faucets and two spouts.

"We're pleased about the new baths in another way. While the remodeling was hardly cheap—nothing is today—we managed it without breaking our budget. Probably could have done so initially, but we were reluctant to start asking about remodeling prices."

Costs were held down for another reason. While much of the old piping had to be replaced, the new plan needed only one new piping run—to a second basin. By not changing the remaining fixture locations, much costly behind-the-walls work was eliminated.

New white fixtures throughout both baths sparkle with Moen's crystal-and-chrome faucets and are a strength in setting off the basic spring green of the master bath (above and left) and the soft blues in the children's bath. Color and material choices were made with the assistance of House Beautiful Furnishings Editor Kathleen Mahoney.

A free-standing counter located on the master bath wall opposite the window was replaced with a lavatory /vanity. Basin in the counter is the only fixture installed where there was no fixture before. The installation makes good sense. This is now "his" counter, its twin is "her" counter. The owners now feel that the greatest asset in their vintage house is the pair of new baths—a bonus to the resale value, should they ever decide to move.

Laundryroom Should Be Moved From Castle Dungeon

The word Laundryroom — to a housewife — conjures up a dark image of a hard day's work ahead in the castle's deepest dungeon.

Many laundry equipment manufacturers have taken that image and discarded it. Now, they say, put the laundry anywhere you want and in any color complementing your decor.

"No longer is it necessary for the housewife to trudge to the farthest corner of the cellar," according to Janet Felmeth, director, Westinghouse Home Economics Institute.

Among the suggestions offered by Ms. Felmeth are:

Although the basement may be the favorite location, it is not the most convenient area. The bulk of the family wash collects in the bedroom-bathroom area and is the most logical spot for laundry equipment. It is not necessary to have a large area to provide a good laundry center. Sixteen square feet can be adequate. If the bathroom is small, there are stackable washer and dryer units. When the dryer isn't in use, it can be utilized as a hamper for dirty clothes.

If, for example the bathroom is large, a new area can be created along an unused wall. Laundry equipment can be conveniently put side-by-side and concealed by sliding doors when not in use.

Storage space and countertops for sorting, folding and laundry products should be nearby. Remember: cabinets are better than shelves because the doors will help keep down the dust that accumulates.

Don't be a Scrooge on good lighting in the laundry area. A combination of overhead fixtures and recessed lighting over work areas is best. You'll need good lighting to check clothing for stains and for reading the instructions. It also saves your eyesight.

For homes with a great deal of space an ideal laundry center would be a separate room and would include besides the laundry equipment, a sink, countertops for sorting, cabinets, an ironing center, a built-in sewing machine and space for sewing accessories.

No matter which laundry layout is created, there are certain installation requirements that have to be considered. Plumbing and draining is needed for the washer.

Laundryroom Should Be Moved From Castle Dungeon

The word Laundryroom — to a housewife — conjures up a dark image of a hard day's work ahead in the castle's deepest dungeon.

Many laundry equipment manufacturers have taken that image and discarded it. Now, they say, put the laundry anywhere you want and in any color complementing your decor.

"No longer is it necessary for the housewife to trudge to the farthest corner of the cellar," according to Janet Felmeth, director, Westinghouse Home Economics Institute.

Among the suggestions offered by Ms. Felmeth are:

Although the basement may be the favorite location, it is not the most convenient area. The bulk of the family wash collects in the bedroom-bathroom area and is the most logical spot for laundry equipment. It is not necessary to have a large area to provide a good laundry center. Sixteen square feet can be adequate. If the bathroom is small, there are stackable washer and dryer units. When the dryer isn't in use, it can be utilized as a hamper for dirty clothes.

If, for example the bathroom is large, a new area can be created along an unused wall. Laundry equipment can be conveniently put side-by-side and concealed by sliding doors when not in use.

Storage space and countertops for sorting, folding and laundry products should be nearby. Remember: cabinets are better than shelves because the doors will help keep down the dust that accumulates.

Don't be a Scrooge on good lighting in the laundry area. A combination of overhead fixtures and recessed lighting over work areas is best. You'll need good lighting to check clothing for stains and for reading the instructions. It also saves your eyesight.

For homes with a great deal of space an ideal laundry center would be a separate room and would include besides the laundry equipment, a sink, countertops for sorting, cabinets, an ironing center, a built-in sewing machine and space for sewing accessories.

No matter which laundry layout is created, there are certain installation requirements that have to be considered. Plumbing and draining is needed for the washer.

Lifestyle '76 With New Americana Collection

American-Standard is celebrating Lifestyle '76 with its new Americana Collection of bathrooms. All will reflect design influences from different sections of the country.

The first to be introduced is this High Rise planned for the sophisticated urban dweller. Although our Founding Fathers would be awed by the splendid efficiency of this modern bath, they would feel at home in the ambience of the warm rich Americana brown and other soft earthtones of the fixtures. The Ultra bathing pool, Carlyle toilet, twin Rondalyn lavatories and Luxette bidet are all in the basic brown which mixes and matches well with most other colors. The integral shower unit is bone. Chrome fittings add the finishing touch to this combination of beauty and utility.
